SWIFT ACTS IN ICE COMBINE

Attorney-General James M. Swift today called in the assistance of the State police in his investigation of the alleged conspiracy between the two ice firms in Hyde Park to boost the price of ice.

The Attorney-General conferred with State Police Officer Arthur E. Keating at the State House today and placed in the latter's hands certain evidence dealing with the case.

Officer Keating was instructed by the Attorney-General to make a thorough investigation and to get all the facts possible. He will make his report direct to Mr. Swift. The latter has stated that he will prosecute the case if any tangible evidence can be secured.

Four prostrations were reported to the police before noon today. Ambulances were on the alert for heat victims at all hospitals.

Boston was today the hottest city in New England. The excessive heat for the past two days began to have its effect today. Yesterday was the hottest day of the Summer. The mercury climbed to 94½, which was half a point hotter than July 1, the record until Sunday. The maximum today was 92 at 2 p. m., but the humidity was intense.

Prophet Smith predicts that a North wind will break the hot spell tonight and that tomorrow will be fair and cooler. The humidity at 8 a. m. today was 77, or eight per cent higher than normal.

Fire in Dorchester Does $3,000 Damage

Practically Destroys One-Story Block of Three Stores.

Fire early today practically destroyed the one-story brick building Nos. 1664-1668 Dorchester avenue, owned by D. Levenbaum and occupied by small goods merchants.

The loss is placed at $3,000, partially covered by insurance.

No cause for the fire has been learned. Neighbors smelled the smoke. The fire had gained considerable headway before the department was notified. An investigation of its start has been begun.

FUGITIVE WRITES HIS MOTHER HE WILL SEE HER AT CRESSON, PA.

THAW DEVELOPMENTS TODAY

The one big clew in the Thaw mystery today is a letter written by the fugitive to his mother, indicating a purpose to meet her at her home in Cresson, Pa.

Mrs. William Thaw will leave for Cresson tomorrow to meet her son.

Thaw is reported as having been seen at Lenox, at Newport, at Danbury, Ct., and at South Norwalk, Ct.

New York officials are preparing to demand Thaw's extradition on the ground that he bribed employes of a public institution.

Warrants have been issued for the arrest of the men who aided in Thaw's escape.

Howard H. Barnum, the Matteawan gatekeeper, has been held on charges of bribery and neglect of duty.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—Harry K. Thaw, who escaped from the Matteawan Asylum for the Criminal Insane, today wrote to his mother, Mrs. William Copley Thaw, at the Hotel Gotham in this city, saying he was well and that he would meet her at Elmhurst, the Thaw Summer home at Cresson, Pa.

Mrs. Thaw said she would leave at 9:25 tomorrow morning for Elmhurst. That note was in a envelope addressed apparently by one of the men who had aided him to escape. It had been mailed from Station O in this city at midnight Sunday. On the envelope had written: "Night letter fifty words. Twenty-five cents." He had evidently intended to send it by telegraph. The note was addressed to Mr. William Thaw, Hotel Gotham, New York city, and reads as follows:

Thaw's Letter to His Mother.

All well. Will take a rest before going to Elmhurst, as I might be asked for interviews and do not wish to refuse. Yet do not care to make any statement. Hope H. and J. arrived safe and that you will go home together. Have sent short note to Journal. H. K. T.

Charging conspiracy in helping Thaw to escape from the Matteawan Asylum, warrants were issued today by Justice Chauser at Poughkeepsie for the arrest of Richard Butler, Thomas Flood, Eugene

HINT ARSENIC CAUSED DEATH OF MANICURE

Important new evidence on the mysterious death of Mrs. Marie Beaucher Le Maire, the Norwood manicurist, is expected to develop today from the sudden trip of Chief of Police Lavers to Rhode Island. It is declared he has obtained a positive clew to the identity of the autoist whose car bore a Rhode Island registration plate and who has been seen much in the company of the agency victim.

Chief Lavers left secretly early today for Providence. It is understood the questions he will put to fare Rhode Island run will do much to clear up the case.

FOSS CHARGES PLOT TO BLOCK NOMINATION

Governor Foss' assistant secretary, George M. Harlow, today charged those opposing the Governor's nomination on the Republican ticket with having tampered with the men circulating his nomination papers. If Foss' name is kept off the official caucus ballot, Harlow asserts, these questionable machinations will have caused it.

"If the nomination papers for Governor Foss are not filed," he declared, "it will be because the men charged with the work of getting signatures have been tampered with. As it is, I have three sets of papers. Middlesex, Bristol and Barnstable counties making good. I am relying on Essex County to complete the list. Should the men there fail us it will all be off.

BOSTON OPERA COMPANY WILL SING IN ITALY

The Boston Opera Company opens its season on August 20 in the little Italian Summer resort of Varese, near Milan, and in the Italian lake district.

The first performance will be "Aida," and a season of several weeks will be given to include many works of the standard repertory.

This extraordinary announcement has just been made by Director Henry Russell, and the curious situation of the Boston Opera Company giving a Summer season in Italy results.

It is hardly fair, however, to call the scratch organization, which Russell is using in Varese, the Boston Opera Company. The male chorus of the Boston company is there and a female chorus picked up in Milan. The orchestra is entirely Italian, and the scenery in the stock scenery of the little opera house which Russell has pre-empted.

Duffy, Michael O'Keefe and Roger Thompson.

On complaint of District Attorney Conger, Assistant Guard Howard H. Barnum, who saw Thaw escape, was held on charges of bribery and neglect as a public officer. It was Barnum who opened the gate for the madman when Thaw dashed to liberty.

Thaw's whereabouts have been the subject of conflicting reports and theories today.

One report is that he stopped over night with a man companion at a Lenox, Mass., hotel.

Another story is that Thaw and the automobile party that rescued him were seen at Danbury, Ct.

Meanwhile the police hold as still plausible the report that, following his escape from Matteawan early Sunday, Thaw boarded a mysterious yacht at South Norwalk and is now on the ocean.

Evelyn Hires Detectives.

The District Attorney has begun to arrange plans for the detention of Thaw if he is found in another State. An effort will be made to hold Thaw on the charge that he bribed officials at Matteawan.

Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, estranged wife of the fugitive, has hired private detectives to guard her.

"Harry Thaw is just as likely to appear at the corner of Broadway and Forty-second street and demand admittance to the theatre where I am playing as he is to go anywhere else," said Mrs. Thaw today. "He is dangerous and desperate, and I fear him. So do his relatives fear him. When I woke up this morning the first thing I did was to thank God that I had been spared my life the night Harry was free. Harry cannot be quiet over twenty-four hours. If he is on a yacht I will feel safer, but he has all the cunning of a maniac and it would be just like him to throw off his pursuers by pretending to sail for some foreign country. That's escape proves that if one has money he can do anything."

Thaw and his guard of alienists are armed with revolvers, declares one witness who saw the party in its flight from Matteawan.

While the theory that he is on a yacht is held by many, there is ground for the belief that the yacht theory is all a blind, and that Thaw is in hiding in Connecticut, Southern Massachusetts or New Jersey.

Maps and books found in Thaw's rooms at the asylum indicated that the slayer thought of going to Brazil, or some other South American country.

However, the authorities make room for the theory that Thaw may have left the maps and books for a blind.

Transatlantic liners have been asked to watch for a sixty-foot, ocean greyhound type of yacht with a yellow funnel. According to persons who saw the yacht in the South Norwalk harbor the craft bore the name "Katherina."

Plans Carefully Laid.

In his connection belief prevails that the yacht was changed in appearance after she put to sea. A forward mast could have been removed, her funnel repainted and she could otherwise have been changed to elude detection.

Thaw's escape by pilot after five years of futile fighting in the New York courts, combine all the romantic and sensational elements of fiction.

From the moment that he dashed through the gates, eluding Keeper H. H. Barnum, while milk was being delivered at the institution, Thaw disappeared as completely as though the earth had swallowed him up. Residents of villages near the Connecticut border and in the between Matteawan and South Norwalk saw two automobiles, one a limousine and the other a touring car, dashing by at seventy miles an hour and some thought they recognized Thaw and two other men crouching in the touring car.

All trace was lost until the threat is picked up again at South Norwalk. There it was learned that three men left a dust-covered motor car about ten o'clock and immediately went on board the yacht. The yacht at once put to sea under a full head of steam and was soon lost to sight.

District Attorney Charles S. Whitman says that Thaw cannot be extradited even if located.

"There is no indictment pending against Thaw in New York and he cannot be brought back because he was legally adjudged insane after being acquitted of murder," said Mr. Whitman.

Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, wife of the escaped lunatic, for whose love Thaw declared he shot and killed Stanford White, is playing at a theatre in this city, and today she felt that her life would be in constant danger until Thaw is again apprehended.

"He threatened to kill me, and I know how remorseless he is," declared Mrs. Thaw. "I must have protection every minute of my time. Thaw is a man with a high dramatic instinct and I know if he should come to take my life the tragedy would be staged with all the theatrical effect that accompanied the killing of Mr. White."

A rigid investigation is going on at the Matteawan institution following ugly hints that Thaw had collusion inside the institution to aid his escape. Barnum was grilled so unmercifully that he nearly broke down. Time after time he declared that he used every means in his power to keep the prisoner safe.

DECLARE THAW AND FRIEND STAID OVER NIGHT AT LENOX

LENOX, Aug. 18.—Harry K. Thaw was reported early today to have stayed at the Lenox Hotel here last night.

Richard A. Stanley, the proprietor, and S. P. Lane and John Murphy, guests, after seeing the photographs of Thaw in today's papers, believed Thaw had stopped here last night with one companion and motored away early today.

The man thought to be Thaw registered at the hotel as E. B. Lewis, a chauffeur, accompanying Dr. Holden of New York. They drove a sixty-horsepower six-cylinder Palmer-Singer car.

Their car had the appearance of hard usage and both men were stained and travel weary. Lewis avoided other guests and refused to enter the dining room.

This morning when papers, bearing the picture of Thaw, were received at the hotel, Proprietor Stanley at once identified Lewis as Thaw. Over the long-distance telephone it was said by the clerk of the hotel that both men left without any breakfast, Sims driving the car.

At Dr. Holden's New York office it was said that he was out of town making an automobile tour. He was last heard from near Saratoga, where his automobile had broken down.

MOTHER GLAD THAW ESCAPED FROM ASYLUM

'MOTHERS OF NATION SURE TO APPROVE'

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—"Harry's escape was like a thunder-clap out of a clear sky to me, but I can't say that I am sorry," was the comment of Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw on the amazing escape of her son from the State Hospital for the Criminal Insane at Matteawan.

Mrs. Thaw, who has been spending the Summer on her country estate at Creson, Pa., left there Saturday morning for New York. It was her intention to welcome her daughter, Mrs. George L. Carnegie, and her husband on their return from Europe and then to visit her son at Matteawan. She is stopping at the Hotel Gotham.

"I was never more astonished in my life than when I heard of this thing at 8 o'clock this afternoon," said Mrs. Thaw last night. "I learned of it from my daughter (Mrs. Carnegie), who heard of it through the newspapers. I haven't the slightest idea how it all happened, nor can I even guess where Harry is now.

"I suppose he will communicate with me as soon as he gets where it is safe. He is too intelligent to take any chances before. They tell me he is in Connecticut, but I have no personal knowledge. I have a letter from Harry written Saturday morning. He said nothing about intending to leave."

Letter Was Mutilated.

The letter, which Mrs. Thaw exhibited, was on a plain sheet of paper, such as is used by stenographers. Everything but the signature is typewritten. It is dated "August 16."

In the centre of the sheet a space sufficient to hold a large paragraph of typewritten words has been cut out. The pieces were then fastened together with small green seals.

In response to a question, Mrs. Thaw explained the mutilation of the letter.

"I cut that section out," she said, "because it referred to two men, lawyers, whom I had never heard of before. It had nothing to do with this case."

She refused to name the men, even in confidence, or to show the missing section of the letter. In its incomplete form the letter follows:

Dear Mother—Mr. Vanamee told me that you are starting. I'm glad it's not very hot, and hope you have an easy trip. A couple of days ago I wrote you and expect the letter reached you before you left home. The only thing immediate was to ask you to telephone to Mr. Shearn's office and learn just what he gets back.

(The missing paragraph follows here.)

I hope Margaret and George return safe and well. That was curious about Copenhagen, when they were given a reception, as though it was "Uncle Andrew." The paper I saw said that George's appearance was very good; but quite unlike Mr. Andrew Carnegie.

Will they come with you or later? It is better maybe to divide the visits. If you don't feel very well Monday, please postpone the visit, for it is better to take things easy. Your affectionate son, HARRY.

The signature is written in pencil in remarkably small letters.

"That doesn't look like Harry's usual signature," remarked the reporter, quite familiar with Thaw's handwriting.

"Wait, I'll see," answered Mrs. Thaw, going to a desk and taking out several other letters. "Yes, the others are the same, only larger," she said, when she had looked at some of them.

Always Opposed Force.

The envelope was not shown, nor was the reporter allowed to compare the signature with those on other letters.

"Harry was in the commissary department, you know," continued Mrs. Thaw, when asked if her son had the use of a typewriter. "I suppose he wrote this while he was at work and had nothing else handy. It doesn't look as if he intended to leave before I came."

"Do you know whether or not he ever considered the plan of escaping by force?" Mrs. Thaw was asked.

"People have mentioned it to him," she replied. "He had plenty of opportunities during the hearings. Several people said to him, 'Why don't you take leg bail?'

"He always refused to consider it then. Never, in all the time I have been with him, have we discussed the possibility of escape through any means other than the law.

"And isn't it about time that he got out of there—a sane man, proved so before the courts, confined with a lot of lunatics in an asylum for the criminal insane? I think it is, and he would have been out before, if it hadn't been for that perjurer, Dr. Russell.

"It was that man's testimony that kept him there the last time he tried to get free. Russell swore then and again that he never saw nor heard of Anhut, and there he was lunching him and dining him and entertaining him all the time. It was his so-called testimony that spoiled the case, after Mr. Shearn had proved to the satisfaction of everybody that Harry was not insane.

Planned Gifts for Harry.

"To get back to the escape and my knowledge of it, here are some things that I was going to take up to Harry tomorrow. They're little gifts that he likes to get from me and that I like to take him. Why, I had even ordered the carriage to be ready for me, and now I won't have to go. Of course, I am glad for his sake as well as my own."

"Have you any idea who the men were that were with your son?" asked the reporter.

"Isn't there a relative of Harry's in New England?" asked Mr. Andrew Carnegie, he younger. He isn't the sort of a man to mix up in an affair of this sort," answered Mrs. Thaw. "He has a place in Massachusetts. I don't suppose he has even heard of this or would be interested in it if he did.

"As to Roger O'Mara, as far as I know, he is in Pittsburgh. I haven't heard from him recently and don't know where he is, but I am almost certain that he is in Pennsylvania. Harry has plenty of friends in New York, some of whom offered to go to see him.

"I don't know anything about the extradition laws and whether or not they can bring Harry back from another State. Nor do I know anything about his possible destination.

"But there is one more thing I want to mention," and here Mrs. Thaw showed every sign of anger, "can you tell me why it is they offer a reward of $500 for Harry? The regular amount is only $50."

ESCAPE DUE TO LAX LAWS, SAYS DR. FLINT

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—Dr. Austin Flint, the alienist, who in all the trials of the criminal proceedings against Harry K. Thaw, testified, as an expert for the State, that the slayer of Stanford White was insane, was asked if he feared Thaw, and if he would now carry a revolver to protect himself against a possible attack.

"Prior to the last hearing at White Plains I said I would apply for a permit to carry a revolver if Thaw was liberated," said Dr. Flint. "I have no fear now that he will return to this State, provided he is outside the jurisdiction of it. Anyway, I am an old man and haven't many years left."

Charges Collusion.

In his interview which Dr. Flint dictated, he said:

"Thaw must have got out through the ward, which is always locked—each attendant having a master key and each member of the medical staff also a key—by collusion, presumably of a keeper. Thaw knows his way about the hospital thoroughly.

"He went to the store room and in the store room is a door or gate leading to the outside. That gate is in charge of an employe who has been in the hospital seventeen years. He was not an attendant. His name is Howard Barnum. He gave notice of the escape in about ten minutes.

"This gave Thaw a ten-minute start. The direct line to Connecticut is sixteen miles, and but a little more by the highway. The distance could be easily made in thirty minutes or less in an automobile.

"Once in Connecticut Thaw is a free man and cannot be recovered by extradition because having been acquitted by the courts he is innocent of any crime. That is the fault of our laws.

"The statutory verdict in the case of a person who has committed murder and is proved to have been insane at the time of the murder is 'not guilty by reason of insanity.' The State Bar Association is now contending for a modification of this verdict in such cases.

Is Free Man.

"In case of a defendant found as under the English law, 'guilty, but insane,' he is a criminal and can be recovered by extradition. The application of this to the case of Harry K. Thaw is evident."

Harry Thaw has three months left his wife in case he should be released. Mrs. Evelyn Thaw testified to that effect at the last two trials of writs of habeas corpus at White Plains. He also, as evidenced by letters, regards Dr. Flint as the chief person responsible for his retention at Matteawan, although he has made no threats of violence against Dr. Flint, so far as he knows.

"It is impossible to forecast what Thaw will do in case he has escaped to another State. His family has repeatedly stated that in the event of his release Thaw would be taken to Europe. Certainly he cannot return to the State of New York without the risk of being retaken and sent back to Matteawan.

"The evidence shows that under the influence of even a small amount of alcohol Thaw became quarrelsome and dangerous in the highest degree. He will not abstain from alcohol, and it is almost certain he will, sooner or later, commit some act of violence.

Patrick Buckley, who was in charge of th storeroom at the asylum, said that Thaw gave no indication of excitement.

"He came into the storeroom about 7 o'clock," said Buckley. "He said, 'Good morning, Mr. Buckley.' I replied, 'Good morning, Mr. Thaw, how do you do this morning.' He walked among the tables for a few minutes. His manner was just the same as it had always been. He was calm. I did not see him escape."

In fact but two employes of the institution saw Thaw gain his liberty. They were Keeper Barnum and Mrs. James Maher, a laundress, who was in a high tower overlooking the exercising grounds and the roadway.

According to Mrs. Maher's story two automobiles, one a touring car and another a laundaret, passed the hospital shortly after 7 o'clock. The laundaret stopped in front of the gate while the bigger vehicle, a six-cylinder touring car, sped on to the foot of Lowery's Hill, almost a mile beyond the asylum grounds. There it stopped and the doors on both sides were opened for quick action.

Mrs. Maher kept her eyes on the machine outside the gate. Although the driver got out and began to tinker with the mechanism, the motor kept humming and there were many loud explosions from the exhaust.

Hickey's milk wagon rumbled to the gate while the laundaret's motor was humming and thumping. Mrs. Maher said as Thaw dashed through the gate he waved his arms and cried, "Go, go; for God's sake, go."

Keeper Barnum was stunned for a moment by the quickness of the escape. Then he notified Superintendent Kieb, who called up the sheriff and notified police headquarters in this city that Thaw got fully ten minutes' start on his pursuers, being headed straight for Connecticut.

Immediately theories began to formulate, but the one chiefly accepted was that Thaw had gone to South Norwalk and boarded a yacht.

Another was that he had headed toward Canada after reaching Connecticut.

EVELYN FEARS DEATH AT HANDS OF THAW

The camera tells better than anything else the story of Evelyn Nesbit Thaw's life since she came from New York to Pittsburgh. The small, inset pictures in the centre shows her shortly after her arrival in New York. Her beauty made her famous within a few weeks. The picture on the extreme left shows Evelyn Thaw, the artist's model. Before the second picture from the left—one of the most popular ever taken of her—was made, she had gone on the stage. Shortly afterward she met Stanford White and Harry Thaw.

WIFE DISCUSSES HER "PREORDAINED FATE"

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—"Anything may happen to me now, with Harry out of the asylum. His last words to me were: 'I'll have to finish you—I'll have to kill you next to complete my job.' And he meant it."

Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, around whose tragic girlhood was wrought the whole Thaw drama, spoke calmly and in measured words of the escape from Matteawan, but outside the Brevoort, where she has her apartments, she had already placed a private guard and a detective under orders from William Hammerstein, waiting to accompany her to the theatre, when she received a Boston AMERICAN representative.

In spite of an almost grandiose that Harry Thaw would scout at any attempt to take her life, she evinced no fear in words. Only the nervous fluttering of her hands as she spoke of the safety of her little son and the dark eyes that testify to the keen strain of nerves told that fear was really in her heart.

Tells of Death Threat.

"I knew at White Plains ten years ago," said Mrs. Thaw, "that Harry had determined to kill me. His threat was not an idle one. I knew by the look on his face, and I know how ruthless he is. Even in the courtroom, behind the big palm leaf fan that he used at the time, he made ugly faces and stared and glared sullenly at me.

"But if my day is at hand," she said quietly, though the nervous hands crushed the blue sash of her simple white dress, "if Harry Thaw kills me, as he has hoped to do ever since we parted, I am fatalist enough to believe that it was just to be. It will have been my preordained fate.

"I think, considering the lives that may be endangered, that the State of New York has a good deal to account for in the escape of such a lunatic. It strikes me as very curious that it should have happened at a time when there is no recognized Governor at Albany and when the present superintendent may be ousted within the next fortnight or so. It looks very queer to me and I think that it is a plot, which, if ever disclosed, will show that the Thaw money is still successful in getting results, wily, slimy, as it has been since the shooting of Stanford White.

Others in Danger.

"And speaking about Stanford White, I would like to say that the feud between White and Harry Thaw began long before I had ever met Thaw. I had nothing to do with the enmity which existed between them. He was intoxicated when he fired the shot. When he gets filled with liquor he will do anything.

"One thing is sure, Harry will not get far away from New York. I know him too well for that. He will want to bring some litigation. He will want to consult lawyers. He will want to get at Dr. Flint, for whom he has a feeling of deadly hatred and vengeance."

"Are there others whose lives are unsafe with him at large?" Mrs. Thaw was asked.

She replied: "Yes, I should say Louis Delafield is one. Mr. Delafield told Mrs. Thaw long before the tragedy that Harry was crazy and should be locked up, and Harry always knew that and hated Mr. Delafield."

"What about Judge Dowling?"

"Oh, Harry would not bother with him," replied the wife. He said to me: 'Dowling is just a plain fool and that lets him out.' He always called Jerome 'a joke' and never took him seriously, but he feared Dr. Flint and felt a deadly enmity towards him.

Hopes He Will be Taken.

"But I am hoping that what the Matteawan officials could not do the police department will do. I hope they capture him. Harry is wily, well versed in law and he will get outside the border of the State for a time, but it will only be for a time, I say, for he cannot resist lawyers and litigation.

"He may decide to finish me first. He has read of my success in vaudeville and has become frenzied over it, for he never believed I would be able to get along without him and his support.

"Before I married Harry Thaw—before he ever darkened my path—I was phenomenally lucky. Everybody thought I was born under a lucky planet; but those years with Harry Thaw were as if an eclipse had gone over the sun and left me in darkness. My life was nothing but a succession of misfortunes until I 'got entirely away' from the Thaw influence last year and went out for myself."

Works for "Kiddie."

"Oh, its splendid to work for that little kiddie of mine. That's what makes the difference; I would have ambition to do nothing were it not for that rosy faced little three-year-old tyke."

"Harry Thaw can do me no injury unless it is harm to my little boy, for he is my all—my present and my future and my everything. Nobody can know what it all means and why motherhood is such a hallowed thing except she who has borne a child."

"Did Harry Thaw know when the little one was born?" Mrs. Thaw was asked.

"No," she replied. "I purposely kept it from him, and Russell was a year old before the story of his birth appeared in the papers. Only a few close friends knew, and they were pledged to secrecy. What I have to say regarding the birth and paternity of my little boy will all come out in good time. I do not want to go into that now. I can prove all I have to say about our boy, but there is no reason for doing that now."

Mrs. Thaw then went on to say that she prepared for motherhood with the greatest care. "I went abroad," she said, 'where my baby might be born in an environment serene and quiet. I wanted to do everything in my power to give the child the very best possible of myself.

"I learned all I could about the bringing up of babies, and my little fellow, when he was born, was the most perfect little human being, both the nurses and the doctors said, that they had ever seen ushered into the world. He was all dimples and health and healthiness and I nursed him myself until he was a year old and would have nursed him longer had I been permitted.

"I believe that any mother who is healthy and refuses to nurse her baby should be fined or punished in some way, for no child of a healthy mother should be started in life with such a handicap and every doctor will tell you that no baby can thrive and be as healthy on bottled milk."

Mrs. Thaw said the little fellow was extraordinarily bright. "He sends me letters with monoplanes drawn on them and kisses written everywhere," she added. "Do you think his mind is perfectly normal?" she was asked.

"Oh, perfectly, but he is extremely bright—a little too bright, perhaps, and I purposely keep him back as much as possible. I do not intend that he go to school for several years. He is in no way abnormal, but his extreme brightness comes from a perfect boyhood and perfect care and health and the preparation I made for his coming, I believe."

Eat a Kellogg Lunch to day and keep cool

THERE is a delicious, "cheer-up" sort of flavor to Kellogg's that everyone likes.

At home, it saves cooking and is better than a hot breakfast. Shun oatmeal and greasy meats, eat Kellogg's and your name will stay out of the "Prostrations" list.

To prevent disappointment, don't merely ask for toasted corn flakes—say "KELLOGG'S, please" and look for this signature on package.

ARBITERS TOUR "L" SYSTEM

Members of Peace Board Brave Torrid Wave to View Engine and Boiler Rooms.

TAKE UP WAGE DISPUTE

The special Board of Arbitration selected to adjust the disputes between the "L" and its employes began its duties today by a personal inspection of the plants and system of the company at the suggestion of counsel for the Carmen's Union.

Today was one of the hottest of the year, yet Chairman James J. Storrow, president of the Chamber of Commerce; Vice-President James L. Richards of the Elevated, and James H. Vahey, representing the employes, went through engine and boiler rooms.

The tour of inspection followed an hour's session in room No. 130 at the State House, where the board began its series of public meetings at 10 a. m. The sessions at which both sides are to submit evidence and arguments are expected to last more than a month.

"Shake," Says Storrow.

Mrs. Storrow was one of the central figures at the opening of the arbitration hearings. She was the only woman in the crowded hearing chamber. She was solicitous about her husband, who recently underwent an operation. She didn't want him to go on the inspection trip, but he assured her he was able. The party went in automobiles.

They first visited the new power plant at City Point. Thomas F. Hennessey, a grimy boiler repairer, acted as escort. When Chairman Storrow offered his hand, Hennessey said modestly:

"You'd better not. I'm too soiled."

"Makes no difference," said Chairman Storrow. "Dirt will wash off, and besides it's the grime of honest labor."

Then the escort shook hands all round.

From South Boston they visited the Atlantic avenue plant and later they visited every branch of the city's street car service, to get, as Attorney John P. Feeney, counsel for the union suggested, a first hand impression of working conditions.

Room is Crowded.

The arbitrators are James J. Storrow, president of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, who is the chairman of the board; James L. Richards, vice-president of the "L," and who represents that company, and James H. Vahey, who represents the Boston Street Carmen's Union.

The proceedings began at 10 a. m. The big Harbor and Land Commission hearing room was thronged. Members of the board and counsel sat at a long table. In front of Chairman Storrow was a mammoth bouquet sent by the boys of the West End House as an expression of their pleasure over his recovery from a recent operation.

Entered as counsel for the employes are John P. Feeney, Joseph B. Eastman and Fred Fay, international organizer of the Street Carmen's Union. With them sat N. J. Nesdale, business agent, and Matthew Higgins, president, of the Boston union. Frederic E. Snow and G. M. G. Nichol appeared as counsel for the Elevated.

Candidates, Inside Gossip and Sich

Congressman Gardner—who is in the race for Governor because he wants to be Governor—says he's a "reformer, not a wrecker."

You remember, in the Parable of the Talents, there was one that polished his talent up so nicely — reformed it, let's say. And there was another who doubled his talent—went out and got the votes.

Governor Foss may not always do just what the machine wants him to do, but he certainly can get a lot of votes.

* * *

The Republican party needs a few thousand votes a lot worse than it needs reform.

* * *

After reading the list of appointments to the State House Commission—Langley, Republican; Tuttle, Independent, and McNeil, Republican—one Thomas P. Riley is understood to have been convinced that Governor Foss is no Democrat.

* * *

Did you ever see Chairman Riley make a speech?

Whew!

* * *

At a meeting once, Chairman Riley said, with a "do-it-if-you-dare" look at the only reporter present:

"I'm aware that I'll be misquoted, but I say, etc."

Next morning, he discovered that he hadn't been quoted at all.

With a "hand picked" (apologies to Mr. Reighwell) candidate in the Democratic party, and a personally conducted campaign in the Progressive ranks, the Republican fight is the only one where the people have a chance.

* * *

The Sphinx was an amiable lady, with traces of Hon ancestry, who put a puzzle to passers. If they failed to guess right first guess, she let the lion in her have his way with them.

Casting the people for the role of the Sphinx, the puzzle would doubtless be:

"Who's the next Governor?"

Riley says "Walsh."

Hale says "Bird."

Oedipus Foss says "We leave it to you."

* * *

We should say that Mr. Riley and Mr. Hale are due to be badly chawed by the people, when election time comes around. For the sounds have it that Oedipus won the bet.

* * *

Tuesday night will see the end of the "nominating for the nomination" fight. Until then, machine leaders will still have bad dreams about Governor Foss, and wake up playing that old game of "Pick the Daisy," or "He will. He won't."

* * *

Just after the crowd at the Essex Republican Club love feast had welcomed Governor Foss in uproarious fashion, the plazza of the Sunta Inn collapsed under them.

But of course that doesn't prove anything as to what will happen to the machine candidates when the people welcome Governor Foss into the race for re-election.

* * *

Scene—Suntang Inn. Two hundred Republicans to welcome Foss, Gardner and Benton.

Enter Gardner.

Cheers!

Enter Foss.

CHEERS!

Enter Benton.

cheers.

* * *

After papers had been filed nominating him for Lieutenant Governor, James F. Cavanaugh withdrew from the race and left it to Councillor Gooding.

He says he did it to help Colonel Benton, fearing that voters would object to him because he managed Colonel Benton's campaign last year.

Benton? Who is this Benton?

Oh yes!

* * *

The odds on Lou Dillon Foss are now one to six against the field.

Funeral Tomorrow for Radcliffe Dean

Death of Mary Coes, 30 Years a College Workers, Is Sudden.

The funeral of Miss Mary Coes, dean of Radcliffe College, who died at the Corey Hill Hospital from the effects of an operation, will be held tomorrow afternoon at 1:30 o'clock in the Appleton Chapel, Harvard. Burial will be in Mt. Auburn cemetery.

Miss Coes had been in the continuous service of Radcliffe College for thirty years. She received the A. B. degree from Radcliffe in 1887 and the A. M. degree in 1897. She occupied the position of assistant secretary of the college from 1890 to 1894 and as secretary from 1894 to 1910. Miss Coes acted as dean during the year 1909-10, and in 1910 she was made dean.

LAWRENCE FILES AFFIDAVIT TO DENY CHARGES

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 18.—To Hon. L. D. Butts, chairman Legislative Committee, La Salle Hotel, Chicago.

"Sir—Before leaving Chicago on August 4, I appeared by counsel before your committee, notified you of my proposed departure on my vacation, but offered to remain in Chicago and place myself entirely at the service of your committee in any way required, and as long as required.

"You informed my counsel and entered the statement upon the record that you have no immediate need for my presence. No sooner, however, had I left Chicago, in accordance with your direction, than you permitted accusations as vague as they are vile and as base as they are baseless, to be made against me by the irresponsible agent of certain corrupt politicians of Chicago, and the characterless and conscienceless newspapers which they control.

"In view of these utterly false, but nevertheless injurious statements I forward to yourself and your committee my affidavit, made before Judge Cabaniss, Judge of the Superior Court of San Francisco County, where I am now declaring under oath that to the best of my knowledge and belief I have never met Mr. Barr, the gentleman whom your inspired informant alleges to have approached me in regard to a certain voting machine, and further declaring that Mr. Walsh did not present Mr. Barr to me.

"Unsupported by Fact."

"The whole of the absurd hearsay testimony admitted by your committee, is, as far as it relates to me, a transparent tissue of obvious fabrications and falsehoods, unsupported by a single credible fact or a scintilla of legitimate evidence.

ANDREW M. LAWRENCE.

State of California,
City and County of San Francisco, ss.

Andrew M. Lawrence, having first been duly sworn, deposes and says:

I am a resident of the city of Chicago, and the president of the Illinois Publishing and Printing Company, the publisher of the Chicago Examiner.

I have read a statement introduced by Charles R. Deneen, before the Legislative Committee of the State of Illinois, investigating the efficiency of voting machines and a certain contract made by the Board of Election Commissioners of the city of Chicago, for the purchase of a device known as the "Empire voting machine." This statement was forwarded to me at the city of San Francisco. It is unsigned and unattested and purports to be the statement of three residents of Ottumwa, Iowa—Arrison, Gray and Pickler—to the effect that they were to be paid $1,500 by one H. W. Barr if they were able to bring about an introduction of H. W. Barr to myself through Charles Walsh and secure my indorsement of the Empire voting machines, it being expected that with my indorsement said Empire machines could be sold to the city of Chicago.

Knows of No Agreement.

I never had any knowledge of such agreement. I do not know H. W. Barr and to the best of my knowledge and belief have never met him. He was never introduced to me by Charles Walsh or by any other person. All statements with reference to any interviews had between myself and H. W. Barr and Charles Walsh with reference to the sale of these machines are absolutely and entirely false and no such interviews ever took place.

Inasmuch as I am temporarily absent from Chicago, with the knowledge and consent of the committee, I hasten to forward this statement by mail and by telegraph to deny an unsigned and unsworn statement, introduced before said committee for the mere purpose of vilifying me.

ANDREW M. LAWRENCE.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this sixteenth day of August, 1913.

GEORGE A. CABANISS,
Judge of the Superior Court of the City and County of San Francisco, State of California.

ENGLAND HONOR BOUND TO TAKE PART IN FAIR

LONDON, Aug. 18.—Under the caption "Wake Up England," the London Standard editorially declares today:

"Undoubtedly there is a large and growing volume of opinion adverse to the government's decision not to give official recognition to the San Francisco exhibition.

"Already it has given rise to the astonishing legend that our action is dictated by childish resentment over the Panama tolls question and, although no serious person believes this, it is hardly advisable to give our warm friends across the Atlantic an impression that their concerns have small interest for us.

The German Argument.

"It may be questioned whether too short a view is not taken of the potentialities and our doubts are in no way lessened by the fact that Germany has also apparently arrived at the conclusion that it is not worth while to participate officially.

"On the contrary, we think the German abstention is one reason more in favor of our being handsomely represented. * * *

"Our government and our business men seem to be suffering from a curious lack of imagination. * * *

Honor of England Involved.

"The honor of Great Britain is involved. A rich country like this has no right to grudge the comparatively small sum necessary to secure it a worthy place among other nations at the exhibition."

Publicity Men's Outing Wednesday

Members of the Pilgrim Publicity Association and friends will celebrate the fourth annual field day of the association with a good time at Bass Point, Nahant, on Wednesday afternoon and evening. They have chartered a special steamer that will leave Otis wharf at 1:15. The day will close with dancing and a moonlight sail home. Among the advertising men who have taken part in arranging the details are Committee Chairman H. F. Barber, Charles E. Bellatty, Charles Dorr, Charles L. Greene, George F. Robbins and Donald MacArthur. About 200 ladies and gentlemen are expected to make the excursion. President Carroll J. Swan will return from Hancock Point, Me., to attend the outing.

The Boston Central Labor Union division of the Labor Day parade is to be headed by a woman for the first time, Miss May Matthews of the Telephone Girls' Union having been chosen for that honor. A thousand members of her union will also march.

Men of every trade cast their ballot for one of the 'phone operators' leaders in preference to the male candidates for marshal. President James T. Moriarty of the Central Labor Union will head the line of nearly 20,000.

It was voted to start the parade at 9:30 a. m. because of the size of this year's demonstration. The Foss strikers of Hyde Park will be given the right of line.

Prisoner Escapes From Moving Train

MONPONSETT, Aug. 18.—Frank Robinson, seventeen, escaped from Chief of Police Albert Brouillard on the way to court at Plymouth today. Robinson was charged with stealing an automobile belonging to Bertram W. Atwood, at Brant Rock. As the train slowed down here, Robinson, who was sitting in the same seat with the chief, but not the aisle, slipped to his feet, dashed for the door, made a flying leap down the embankment and disappeared into the woods along the track.

DENY HUERTA HAS RECEIVED WILSON'S NOTE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.—Despite previous dispatches to the contrary, members of the Mexican government asserted today, according to messages, that President Wilson's note brought to Mexico City by Special Envoy John Lind had not officially been laid before President Huerta. It was tacitly admitted that the note is in the possession of the government and that it will have the formal consideration of President Huerta within twenty-four hours. A reply to the note is expected to be received Wednesday or Thursday. Belief is growing here that Huerta will agree to mediation terms proposed by President Wilson.

Fighting in the southern part of the federal district between government soldiers and Zapatists is increasing in fierceness. At Ayotzingo, eight miles south of this city, there was a sharp engagement yesterday.

President Wilson has no great hope that the proposals that have been given to President Huerta by Envoy Lind will be accepted. The attitude of the administration towards the Lind mission was indicated a resentment of American interference. Senator Bacon, chairman of the Senate Foreign Affairs Committee, discussed the situation with the President today, but was not hopeful of any improvement in the situation when he left the White House.

THE LAST PUZZLE PICTURE IN THE

American's Picture Puzzle Contest

WILL BE PRINTED

155 Cash Prizes

WILL BE AWARDED

Anyone May Enter the Contest TODAY

The time limit for sending in answers will soon be announced through this column. It is good news to the thousands of contestants in the AMERICAN'S Picture Puzzle Contest that they will not have to submit their answers the day after the contest closes, but will be allowed time to go over their solutions and make certain of all those of which they have any doubt.

Moreover, it will be a great opportunity for those who wish to enter the contest NOW.

Today the AMERICAN prints the sixty-fourth puzzle picture; so that the newspaper who is in earnest has only a little time to enter the contest and submit his answers.

On all sides we hear nothing but commendation for the contest. The competitors realize they have obtained a lot of valuable mental exhilaration from studying the guide with its more than three thousand proverbs

If you are not in this contest glance over the list of cash rewards and see how worth while it will be for you to get in at once.

Those already in have studied the prize list and know that their efforts, if successful, will more than repay them for the time and trouble they have taken in solving the puzzle pictures.

For instance, there is no one who would not be glad to win the capital prize—$1,000 in gold.

Think of it—$1,000 in gold for sending in the correct solutions to seventy-five puzzle pictures, or a trifle more than thirteen dollars a picture. In all likelihood many of the contestants did not spend more than half an hour over a picture—and thirteen dollars for a half hour's work is mighty high pay.

So, you see, if you belong to the army of those who like to put off this till the last moment, your opportunity is right before you—this is one of the easy ways you do not have to wait for pay day. The time to get into the contest is NOW, and every day from now on will mean so much less chance for you.

Remember, the AMERICAN has made it as easy as it can be made for contestants who are in earnest.

The guide can be obtained for the moderate sum of twenty-five cents or five cents more if sent by mail. Back pictures may be obtained at the regular rates of the AMERICAN, that is, one cent for each daily picture and five cents for each Sunday picture. There is no extra charge for postage.

So we say to every one who is willing to use his ability to win, that here is an opportunity to try for an award worth the having. Glance at the prize list and see for yourself.

TRACE POISON SALES IN DEATH OF MANICURE

busy for weeks in the Admiral Eaton poison mystery, today began a search for places where poison taken by Mrs. Le Maire might have been purchased. Norwood drug stores have already been eliminated.

Chief Lavers significantly declared: "It may have been arsenic that killed Mrs. Le Maire." Drug stores in Dedham and vicinity will be visited today.

The report of Professor Pierce on his search for poison clews is eagerly awaited. Mrs. Le Maire's body will be buried today in the Norwood cemetery. The date for the inquest has not yet been fixed.

The police plan to interview the crew of a street car Mrs. Le Maire is known to have ridden on the last night she was seen alive.

Chief Discusses Case.

Chief of Police Lavers of Norwood said to the AMERICAN:

"This case looks suspicious, the more I think it over; it really looks bad to me. Remember, I am not accusing anybody when I say this, but there are circumstances in connection with the case which only future developments can disclose. Nothing can be done until we hear the report of the medical examiner.

"However, the State Police are more than anxious to take a hand in the case. The chief called me up and offered me the assistance of the State Police.

"Dr. Carroll came to my office and wanted to talk with me. We were in conference for about an hour. Then Assistant District Attorney Frederick G. Katzmann of Milton called me up on the telephone and asked me if I wanted his assistance in the case.

"When we entered Mrs. Le Maire's room early Friday morning she lay on the couch. It is barely possible Mrs. Le Maire may have been drugged and then attacked, but I do not think such was the case.

"Patrolman Reid arranged the woman's clothes and, taking a tablecloth from a nearby chair, covered the body with it. She did not pull the tablecloth over her head herself, nor did any one else do it except the officer at my direction. I helped put the cloth in the undertaker's basket and it was just as limp and supple as if she had just died.

"My own opinion is that she probably awoke Thursday morning and, feeling especially bad, took an overdose of some drug. This may have put her in a stupor from which she never rallied, and she probably died late Thursday afternoon. She couldn't have been dead many hours, as her body had not begun to stiffen. I do not think that she had had anything to eat all day Thursday, at least.

Talks of Auto Story.

"I don't know what to make of that Rhode Island automobile story. I do know for a fact, however, that Mrs. Le Maire got into an auto in front of Holman's lunch cart at about 3 p. m. on the afternoon of Tuesday, August 5. This auto positively had a Rhode Island number, but there was no reason at that time for any one remembering it."

The chief of the Norwood Cafe on Washington street said:

"I knew the woman slightly. I was coming home from closing the cafe at two o'clock on Wednesday morning, August 6, when I crossed the street to get some cigars at the lunch room near the Snow block. Because it happened to be so late I noticed particularly that there was a light in Mrs. Le Maire's room at that hour. It was either shaded or turned very low."

Declares Husband Planned to Elope

Under a new law of "contemplated non-support," Walter H. Lord, a prominent druggist of Malden, was arrested at the request of his wife, who alleges that he was planning an elopement.

Lord disappeared some time ago and was gone a month. On his return he said he had suffered from a lapse of memory. Shortly after he resumed he sold his business and was, Mrs. Lord claims, planning to go away again.

Wife Hales Maldén Clubman Into Court

Walter H. Lord, Malden druggist and clubman, was arraigned today before Judge Bruce in the Malden Court on the charge of failing to support his wife, upon whose complaint he was arrested yesterday. The case was continued until November 15. Lord agreed to pay his wife $5 weekly meanwhile. Behind the case is a story of domestic tribulations.

Miss Siebert Eager For Trip to Boston

Niece of Governor Oddie to Christen Nevada.

Eleanor Anne Siebert, the ten-year-old Reno girl, niece of Governor Oddie of Nevada, who is to christen the battleship Nevada at the Fore River yard at Quincy on October 1, says she is almost as anxious for her first trip to Boston as she is to break the bedecked bottle of champagne on the steel nose of the battleship.

Eleanor is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred J. Siebert of Reno. He says he is employed by Millionaire George Wingfield as an expert mining engineer and her mother is the sister of Governor Oddie. A silver service made of bullion taken from Nevada mines will be presented to the new battleship.

Lynn Postoffice Is Made Distinct

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.—Postmaster-General Burleson, following a conference with Representative Phelan of Massachusetts today, ordered the immediate separation of the Lynn postoffice from the Boston postal district. The consolidation of the Lynn office with the Boston district was effected in March and since that time the Lynn Chamber of Commerce and business men have been trying to bring about a separation. The order today creates a new job for a postmaster at $4,200 a year.

The Postmaster-General also announced that he has under consideration the separation of Waltham postoffice from the Boston district.

22 Game Cocks Are Formally Executed

An official court death warrant was issued today by Judge E. T. Lane in the Waltham District Court, calling for the execution by axe of twenty-two game cocks captured along with fifteen men in a raid June 17 on the estate of Charles H. Coolidge, Mt. Auburn street, Watertown. Deputy Sheriff F. C. Walker carried out the court's order. The death warrant contained a complete description, names, ages and other data concerning each bird. The fifteen men arrested were fined. Coolidge was among them.

Parisian Reports Big Berg on Banks

August is supposed to be the closed season for icebergs in the North Atlantic, but the 183 cabin and 61 steerage passengers on the Allan liner Parisian, which docked today, were treated to the unusual spectacle of an August iceberg last Thursday afternoon on the Grand Banks. The berg was 400 feet long and 100 feet high and the steamer passed within two miles of it. Among the passengers was Heinrich Schmidt, the amateur golfer, who has been playing in England.

Floating Hospital Girl Gains Pound

Berena Smith, six months old, is the most interesting patient on the Boston Floating Hospital, for the doctors are trying to build her up from four pounds ten and one-half ounces to normal weight by "malt soup," a new food they are experimenting with.

She has been a patient seventeen days and has increased in weight at the rate of more than an ounce a day.

Fish Prices Drop with Big Arrivals

Big arrivals of fish at T wharf today sent wholesale prices tumbling. Steak cod, which has been quite scarce, is now plentiful. Of the 500,000 pounds of codfish landed at the wharf today more than one-third was steak cod. In all three-quarters of a million pounds of groundfish arrived in seventeen vessels, together with 35,000 fresh mackerel and 150 swordfish.

ELSIE BURR OF VINCENT CLUB IS NOW NURSE

Miss Elsie Burr, one of the wealthiest young girls in Boston society, has begun work as a nurse at the Children's Hospital on Huntington avenue. This became known today.

Miss Burr was one of the prettiest debutantes last Winter. Her father, I. Tucker Burr of the banking house of Parkinson & Burr, gave her a gorgeous coming out party at the Copley Plaza. A brilliant social career was predicted for her.

Suddenly she announced her determination of following the lead of a number of other Vincent Club girls by becoming a nurse. Despite the fact that the hot weather was coming on she enrolled as a nurse at the Children's Hospital and there she has spent the Summer making up beds and doing the almost menial work of the young nurses.

In preparation for her training at the Children's Hospital on Huntington avenue, Miss Burr has spent the most of the early Summer at the hospital on Children's Island, Marblehead. Here she had the care of many of the younger children at the island hospital.

To complete her course in training in the School of Nursing at the Children's Hospital it will be necessary for Miss Burr to spend three years in the study of the theory and practice of nursing.

The Burr family is one of the best known of Boston's "400." Their Back Bay residence is at No. 166 Marlboro street. In the Summer months the Burr family have a home in Milton.

M. J. M'Namara Asks Federal Position

McNamara, formerly of Clinton, Mass., today filed a petition with the Department of Justice seeking appointment as assistant district attorney of the federal division of the District of Columbia. This petition bears the indorsement of Lieutenant-Governor Walsh of Massachusetts, Judge Harmon Riley and a majority of the members of Massachusetts delegation in Congress.

Cambridge Man Ends Life in Cell

Robert J. Fleming, forty-nine, of Newman street, North Cambridge, who hanged himself in the Cambridge police station, had been arrested at the request of his wife.

Who is the phone operator with the longest continuous service in New England?

"What telephone operator has seen the longest continuous service?" asks a reader of the AMERICAN, who has followed the search for the street car conductor longest in continuous service. That search gave the honor to "Cy" Adams of Newburyport.

Now, in the telephone search, the AMERICAN will give the same awards—$25 to the discoverer and an equal amount to the operator sought. Send in the name, address and a complete report of the service.

The contestants must be in active service now.

Replies must all be in by Friday, August 22.

RED TAPE BAD FOR BOSTON AS MODERN PORT

Dr. G. B. Foscue of Waco, Tex., who arrived today on the Allan liner Parisian, declared that the port of Boston is getting a reputation in Europe and among American tourists that will prove its undoing if conditions, which make it uncomfortable to land here from a foreign port, are not corrected. Said he:

Boston has the name of being the hardest port to enter on the Atlantic coast. For the European of education and culture, the extremely personal questions asked by the immigration officials and the long reel of red tape that must be unwound before he can secure a landing ticket is very distasteful.

The customs examination of passenger baggage—an honest person is made to feel like a smuggler and a thief—is unnecessarily vigilant and exacting.

G. F. Jones Dies in Maine.

ROCKLAND, Me., Aug. 18.—George Franklin Jones, aged sixty-two, former president of the New York Cotton Exchange, died suddenly at the Somerset Hotel, Rockland Breakwater.

NEW SULZER CLASH OVER STATE BIDS

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 18.—Forces were marshaled today for another week of bitter warfare in the fight between Governor William Sulzer, the impeached Executive of this State, and Lieutenant-Governor Martin H. Glynn, for possession of gubernatorial prerogatives pending Mr. Sulzer's trial on charges of "high crimes and misdemeanors," to be heard next month.

A physical clash between the two aspirants was expected today at a meeting of the trustees of public buildings which was held to open bids for $1,000,000 worth of work in the burned portion of the Capitol.

Under the law the secretary to the Governor is also secretary of the trustees of public buildings. Chester G. Platt, private secretary to Sulzer, was designated to go to the meeting and receive the bids turned in by State Architect Pilcher.

Lieutenant-Governor Glynn, who claims to be the constitutional acting Governor, directed his secretary, Frank L. Tierney, to get the bids.

Millions Tied Up.

This was just one of the incidents in the tie-up of the State machinery which involves millions of dollars in various ways.

Governor Sulzer, accompanied by his bodyguard, arrived at the State Capitol at 10:30 o'clock and entered the executive suite. The Governor found a number of friends to greet him. He said he was feeling good and that Mrs. Sulzer, who has been suffering from a nervous collapse brought on by the political struggle, is also better.

"That makes me feel much better," said the Governor. He said that he had no intention of weakening in the fight to hold his office, although he did not want to precipitate "an unseemly contest" which might hurt the State's dignity in the eyes of the nation.

Plan New Defence.

Sulzer then planned into his morning mail. It is learned that the Sulzer army of counsel, headed by D. Cady Herrick, are planning to base their defence of Sulzer's claims to the Governor's chair upon Article 6, Section 1, of the New York Constitution, which provides that no judicial officer of the State shall serve during good behavior after proceedings. The Sulzer lawyers construe this to mean that all State officers may serve from the time they are impeached until actually convicted.

Ben Adhemites on Trip.

A large delegation of Abou Ben Adhem Temple, D. O. K. K., of Boston, sailed aboard the steamer Governor Cobb today on a pilgrimage to St. John, N. B. A big reception and entertainment await the pilgrims.

"CY" ADAMS, dean of New England trolley conductors, who won American prize for longest service.

Uncle "Cy" Adams of Newburyport, oldest street car conductor now serving in New England, who won the AMERICAN'S $25 prize by virtue of that distinction, today preached a little sermon while he collected fares on his early trip.

He had the $25 in one pocket, and drew out the money to show an occasional inquiring friend. "How'd you do it, Cy?" more than one passenger asked.

Before he got to the end of the route he had an answer drafted, about like this:

"It's a case of stick-to-it-iveness," he explained. "In our family there was always one thing we would do, when we started on a job we could stick to it.

"I started in here as a kid and got to be conductor July 9, 1873, forty years ago. I haven't been on the carpet since then and haven't had a serious accident.

"It's all being careful. Take things cool. Don't get flustered. Plug away at your job. If things go wrong, why just keep a-plugging."

Everett Townsend Dead.

Everett Townsend, a prominent Faneuil Hall marketman, fell dead of heart failure while running for a train at Point Allerton today. Mr. Townsend had a Summer home at Hull and a Winter home in Brookline.

LEAVE SHILOH SECRETLY FOR WEST INDIES

DURHAM, Me., Aug. 18.—A large party of Shiloh residents, including several women and children, left the Hilltop under cover of early morning darkness today on a secret mission to the West Indies. The Colonists were under orders from "Elijah" Sanford, who is confined in the Federal penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga.

The party left while an investigation was begun into the death of thirteen-year-old Hayden Jones, whom his sister charges was deliberately starved. Mrs. Mary S. Burnham, an agent for the Children's Protective Society, has charge of the investigation.

The Shiloh colonists, carrying their clothing wrapped in dunnage bags, were met at the gates of Shiloh by several carriages. They reached South Freeport before daylight. The party went aboard the yachts Coronet and Barracouta. The destination of the yachts was given as San Salvador and Bermuda.

Many Sign Papers for B. F. Sullivan

Representative Benjamin F. Sullivan of East Boston today filed nomination papers containing more than 300 certified signatures endorsing him for the Democratic nomination for the Governor's Council from the Fourth District. William H. Barrier is also a candidate for the nomination. Sullivan advocates full publicity in the proceedings of the Executive Council.

Bryan Denies He Is to Give Up Lectures

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.—Secretary of State Bryan today denied a report that he had decided to leave the lecture platform because of unfavorable criticism and public opinion. The Secretary charges that his editorial in the current number of The Commoner has been misquoted and said he made no change in plans and that he expected to resume the lecture platform as soon as he found it possible to start on a vacation.

Danced With Broken Bone.

STOCKBRIDGE, Aug. 18.—Miss Dorothy Sherman of Brooklyn, staying at Heaton Hall here, on her way to a dance, gave a little jump over a rock on the path. Her right skirt tripped her and she fell. After dancing all evening she discovered her collar bone was broken.

CHICAGO, Ill., Aug. 18.—Winning three out of four games from the Browns, the Red Sox now will have their battle for a first division berth. The next stand is in this city and if the champs can keep up their clever work they ought to supplant their white hosed rivals.

While the Red Sox have not the appearance of a world's championship club this trip, they have the prospect of getting together a mighty good pitching staff for 1914. Pitching really caused the downfall of the 1912 kings this year. Joe Wood has been missed and Charley Hall has been a disappointment. In the series in St. Louis the Sox showed two mighty clever kids in Anderson and Mosely.

Anderson Handles Himself Well.

In seven innings Anderson allowed but two runs and six hits, while Mosely gave but one run and one hit in six innings. It wasn't exactly on such a performance that made the youngsters look so good, but the way they handled themselves on the hill.

The Sox may need a first baseman, too, to come back and be a fug contender next year, as Engle does not fill Stahle shoes. But the pitching staff is promising if Mosely and Anderson develop.

Carrigan's Big Mistake.

First Baseman Mundy was given a chance against the Browns. He is a left-hander and was pretty fast around first. Several wild throws were sent to him and he scooped all of them, but one, and that hit two feet in front of him. Then he poled a liner to left for a single.

Boss Carrigan made a mistake with his recruit. In the eighth inning Hooper was on second, with two out, and the Sox behind two to one, when it was Mundy's turn to hit. Carrigan went up instead. These are places where a manager has a chance to find out how good a recruit is in the pinch, but Carrigan wouldn't give Mundy the chance.

Swede Makes Long Swim.

STOCKHOLM, Aug. 18.—Nils Stenstroem, a Swede, swam across the sound from Lanskrona, Sweden, to Skedsborg, Denmark.

Arthur Pelky Ready to Battle Rivals

Big "White Hope" Confident He Will Make Good in the Ring

By H. M. WALKER.

Arthur Pelkey, generally accepted as the heavyweight champion of the world, has just made a statement that should win for him the respect of every sporting man in America.

"Some people say that I am a fluke champion," said the big Canadian. "Maybe I am; perhaps I'm the real thing. I don't know the answer myself but we will soon find out all about it.

"I claim no credit for beating poor Luther McCarty, but the title has been forced on me and I'm going to defend it.

"I am ready to fight myself through all opposition. Any heavyweight that is entitled to a match will get it so long as I hold my present position.

"I want to find out just where I stand. I will work in such a way as to gain the confidence of the public. The promoters will find me easy to handle. I ask only that the public give me the benefit of all doubt until I have had a chance to fight again.

"If I'm a real champion I'll be proud to have my name in the record book with those of men like Jeffries, Corbett, Fitzsimmons and Sullivan. If I'm merely a pugilistic accident I can go back to my trade and work like a white man. That's all I have to say. Give me a square deal in the papers. Don't quote me at all unless you state my true position."

Mr. A. Pelkey has been quoted verbatim. He talks like a man.

* * * * * *

Pelkey will cut his stage work and return to the ring no later than the last week in September.

Charley Miller, the San Francisco motorman, will be Pelkey's first opponent, the big men to meet in a scheduled two ten-round contest before the Pacific Athletic Club at Vernon the latter part of next month.

"We took on Miller," said Burns, manager of Pelkey, "because he and his manager have been making every effort to get to us. As it is our intention to make a thorough clean-up of the white heavyweights, we might as well begin with this fellow, who is as tough as they send in the ring nowadays.

"Everybody will be given a chance. We'll take on the white heavies at the rate of one a month as long as they last. But there will be nothing doing for the colored men. I made a big mistake in giving a negro a chance at the heavyweight title and I'll never hear the last of this break. Pelkey, so long as I am manager, will never box a black man. We draw the color line and draw it tight."

Richards' Swim Mark Hard One to Beat

It was the general opinion today among authorities on swimming and those closely connected with the sport, that the record set by Sam Richards, the South Boston long-distance swimmer, when he swam to Boston Light and return yesterday, a distance estimated at twenty-three miles, in thirteen hours and eight minutes, would stand for some years to come.

The Light was reached in six hours and thirty-four minutes. Shortly after he began his return it became dark and the final four hours of his journey was made in darkness.

Tim Mahoney of Lowell made his second successful swim to the Light but did not attempt the return. He negotiated the distance in seven hours and fifteen minutes, George Sheldon of East Boston was another to attain the goal.

Close Finishes Rule in Winthrop Races

Some very close and exciting swimming races were held at Winthrop yesterday, under the direction of the United States Volunteer Life Saving Association, and drew thousands of people.

In the three-quarters of a mile race for girls, Ruth Meyers was returned the victor, after being pushed hard by Esther Garfaty. The girls had the tide with them and made the distance in the excellent time of seventeen minutes and forty seconds. Lawrence Cox and Nicholas Shaw raced to a dead heat over the same course in sixteen minutes flat. The canoe tilting match between George Kelley and Bert Long, and Wilfred Long and Edward Winton was declared a draw. A lifebrar race between members of the corps and an exhibition of rescue and resuscitation work were other features.

Girl Associates to Honor Marion Gibson

Girl associates of Marion Gibson, the Dorchester girl who recently swam to the Boston Light, will honor her at Revere Beach next Thursday. On that day a series of swimming races and other water sports will be held, including races for girls at 10, 25 and 220 yards, and for boys at 50, 100 and 440 yards. A race for fat men, an obstacle race and an event for married men are some of the novelties proposed.

In addition to Marion Gibson and her sister, Gertrude, some of the girls who have promised to compete are Molly Rauschal, Marguerite Porter, Marion Walsh, Mary Byrne and Pauline Walsh.

Nahant to Revere.

Joseph M. Sheeran of the St. Joseph's T. A. Society of Boston, yesterday swam from Nahant to Revere Beach Y. C. in 4 hours 25 minutes.

Britons Ask Funds for Olympic Games

LONDON, Aug. 18.—An appeal for $500,000 to enable Great Britain to make the best showing possible in the Olympic contests at Berlin in 1916 is issued through the press by Lord Grey, Lord Harris, Lord Rolleris, Lord Rothschild, Lord Strathcona and the Duke of Westminster. In a sort of athletic manifesto these gentlemen ascribe the failure of the English athletes at Stockholm to lack of funds.

They insist that such failures as shown by the British athletes at Stockholm must never recur. It would be better, they declare, for England to withdraw from the Olympic movement altogether.

Coulon Roughing It in Canadian Wilds

Chicago Bantamweight Will Be Ready to Battle Williams in the Fall

By JACK CONWAY.

JOHNNY COULON is roughing it in the Canadian wilds. The Chicago bantamweight declares his health has improved a great deal during the past month and that he will be ready to defend his "title" by the latter part of September or early in November.

Coulon has not engaged in a ring contest since he fought Frankie Burns of Jersey City. It will be remembered that Burns held Coulon even for ten rounds and that the "go" was declared a draw by the newspaper experts who saw the battle.

Burns made things so interesting for Coulon that the latter was forced to go to an hospital after the bout. He claimed he was bothered with stomach trouble and was unable to train properly for his contest with Burns.

When Coulon enters a ring again, he will be forced to meet "Kid" Williams of Baltimore. Williams has proved that he is one of the classiest bantamweights in the business and is the logical opponent for Coulon.

Wise Johnny will probably demand that the match be at 118 pounds ringside. He can make this weight himself as he very seldom scales more than 112 pounds. Williams, on the other hand, is a big bantamweight. He experienced great difficulty in making low weight several months ago and has got bigger since then.

If Coulon does not start boxing until November, Williams may then be a full fledged featherweight. Therefore he would not be able to secure a match with the Windy City lad.

If Williams proves that he is able to make 116 pounds in the Fall, Coulon is very liable to get another attack of stomach trouble. It is peculiar the way certain champions become ill when a regular big league fighter puts in an appearance upon the pugilistic horizon.

BROWN IS AFTER WILLIAMS

MICKEY BROWN of Malden would be a good "card" if pitted against Williams at the Atlas A. A. Brown has made a fine record in the ring during the past year and there are many fight "fans" who believe he would be able to make things interesting for the Baltimore wizard.

The Malden boy is one of the best boxers developings in New England during the past five years. He is a very skilful boxer, can hit fairly hard and uses excellent ring generalship. Mickey, of course, is not a champion and still has a whole lot to learn but if he is handled properly he should do well.

It is always good policy to encourage local boxers. They usually have large followings and it helps the sport if a community can boast of a champion or several near champions.

READ TRAINING WITH JASPER

JACK READ, the Australian lightweight champion, is in fine condition to box. Read has been training in North Reading with Sam Langford. The Australian leader has done most of his work with "Young" Ritchie, alias "Young" Jasper, the popular Boston lightweight.

Joe Woodman says Read is one of the strongest lightweights in the world and a typical fighter. "Read does his best work at close quarters," said Woodman today. "He does not show very well when his opponent refuses to fight but if the other fellow does his part Read will always give an excellent account of himself. He is as game as they make them and does not know the meaning of the word quit."

WALKER WITH LANGFORD AGAIN

PETE WALKER, the Dartmouth football trainer, is preparing Langford for his bout with "Porky" Flynn at the Atlas A. A. a week from tomorrow night. Walker was with Langford six years ago but of late years he has spent his time training the athletes of one of our large Eastern colleges. Pete is an old hand in the fight game and should be of great assistance to Langford.

GILBERT GALLANT IS RESTING

GILBERT GALLANT will be ready to box again within a few weeks. The Chelsea boy has been resting at his home in Chelsea since his bout with Eddie Murphy. Gallant is still a youngster and will defeat many a leader before he retires from the ring. Gilbert does not show well against clever boxers but usually more than holds his own when pitted against the sluggers. It would not be a bad idea to arrange another meeting between Gallant and Baldwin. There is considerable rivalry between these two lightweights and if they were both in good condition they would be sure to put up a slashing battle.

ONE ON CARL MORRIS

"WILDCAT" OLIVER, the Pueblo welterweight who is in Boston seeking matches, tells a humorous story about Carl Morris. Oliver was in Jim Flynn's corner when he knocked out Al Kaufman in Kansas City on May 5, 1911.

"At that time Carl Morris was classed among the leading white heavyweights in the world," said Oliver, "and he was in Kansas City to challenge the winner of the Flynn-Kaufman bout. Just before the big 'go' started Morris got into the ring. He was introduced to the 'fans' but a ripple of laughter throughout the building was the old greeting he received.

"Morris turned white and choked up. He started to speak in a loud, shaky tone.

"'I ain't much of a speaker,' said the Stapylton giant. That was as far as he got.

"'And you ain't much of a fighter either,' yelled the 'fans' in unison. Morris turned as white as a sheet and beat a hasty retreat out of the ring. He did not care to take any more chances with those wild fight followers."

BRITONS PLAN TO LIFT THE POLO TROPHY

LONDON, Aug. 18.—Lord Ashby St. Ledgers is organizing a team to try to recapture the International Polo Cup, for which the English team was beaten by the Americans at Meadow Brook this year. He intends to submit to the Hurlingham Club a definite proposal which will enable that organization to issue a challenge.

Lord Ashby St. Ledgers proposes to overcome the difficulty of combined practice which arises from the English spring weather by arranging for the team to practice in Madrid before going to America.

Chappie Is Victor.

TENNIS STARS IN TOURNEY AT NEWPORT TODAY

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 18.—The thirty-second annual tournament of the United States National Lawn Tennis Association commenced today on the grounds of the Newport Casino.

Play was called at 10:30. The principal matches will be played every day on the championship course in front of the grand stand and boxes, which is now sort of an amphitheatre. There are some fifteen grass courts and two sand courts.

The national doubles, interscholastic singles and national singles championships will be decided during the tournament. The championship game in doubles will probably be played tomorrow, or if not then, on Wednesday, and the interscholastic championship games are expected to begin on Thursday.

It should prove to be the banner week of the season with crowds of people coming to witness the playing from Providence, Boston, New York and the nearby Jamestown, which always outdoes itself.

The prizes for the national lawn tennis tournament are on exhibition in the lobby of the Casino. They include the Casino championship trophies for doubles, two large silver ewers, on which are the names of Touchard and Little and McLoughlin and Bundy; the large loving cup, emblematic of the championship in singles, given by the National Association, on which are the names of William A. Larned and M. E. McLoughlin; the silver tennis racket, given by the Casino, also for the championship in singles, and also bearing the names of Larned and McLoughlin.

The association cup must be won three times to become a player's own, while the Casino racket must be won only two years. McLoughlin or Larned would secure this if either should win it this year.

There are also two handsome cups for the winner of the all-comers. These will be won outright by the players who stand first and second. In addition there is a small ewer, given by the national association to the winner of the interscholastic championship.

Maurice E. McLoughlin, R. Norris Williams and Harold H. Hackett, the American tennis players who won the Davis cup; William A. Larned, Beals C. Wright, Karl H. Behr, Gustave H. Touchard, are in the long list of drawings made today.

Forbids Cobb to Play Winter Ball

LOS ANGELS, Aug. 18.—President Navin of the Detroit American League Club has sent word to Ed Maier, promoter of the local team known as the Select Kids, that he will not allow Tyrus Cobb to play on the coast next Winter. For the last two months Maier had been negotiating with the Georgian to play here every Sunday from November to the first of March, but navin's message ends the dickering. Navin incidentally wrote that he is considering California for the Tigers' next training trip.

New England League Averages

By W. P. PETERS.
(Official Scorer of the New England League.)

Pete Wood of the New Bedford Club is leading the New England League stickers in the averages published today. Jimmy Magee of Lowell, however, is the real leader, as Wood has participated in but twelve games and Magee in ninety-seven. Wilson of Lynn is pushing Magee hard, and today finds him in the race to the margin of a single point. Bunny Hoscock, who held the lead for some weeks, is in a slump, and he fell back to sixth place. His teammate, Charley Hickman, is coming with a rush and has passed Boweck, topping the latter's average by four points.

Speaker Fails on High Toss in Air

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 18.—If you were told that Tris Speaker, star outfielder for the Boston Red Sox and who owns a whip that is the terror of all ambitious base thieves, could not throw 223 feet, would you believe it?

Bet, your clothes that he cannot, but be careful and stipulate that the throw must be straight up into the air. Last night Speaker volunteered the remark that he could stand in the middle of Fourth street and throw a baseball on the top of the Pierce building, a distance of 223 feet.

A bet was closed with Joe Wood and after several trials Speaker gave up and paid.

New England Teams Get Maine Players

BANGOR, Aug. 18.—Outfielder Tetrault and Shortstop McPherson of the St. Croix team of the New Brunswick and Maine League have been sold to the New England League by Frank Leonard.

Tetrault goes to Portland and McPherson to Lynn.

Tetrault stands second in the league to Matthews of Bangor in hitting, batting at a mark of .366. McPherson, who has had New England League experience, is batting at league .290 and is one of the fastest infielders in the league.

Lipton Dissatisfied; May Call Off Races

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—There is a hitch in the negotiations about the conditions to govern the America's cup races next year, and it is possible that there will be no race. Several yachtsmen high in the councils of the New York Yacht Club are of opinion that the two committees representing the New York and Royal Ulster Yacht Clubs will fail to agree.

In that event only one way is left to have a series of races sailed. The deed of trust specifically states that in the event of the challenging club and the challenged club failing to agree on the conditions, rules, courses, etc., the match shall consist of three races, the course be forty miles and the yachts race without time allowance.

Sir Thomas is still blickering, and it is the same old trouble. He wants the New York Yacht Club to say that it will meet the challenging yacht with a vessel of similar size. He has tried now three times to have the defending club do this, and each time so far he has failed.

PILGRIMS IN A DOUBLE-HEADER

The Cincinnati Reds and the Pilgrims believe his appearance in the field will have more effect on his men than it would if he were on the sidelines.

Boston will probably use "Lefty" Tyler and "Hub" Perdue in the box, while "Red" Ames, who has had great success since he turned into a Chicago uniform, and Indian Johnson will do the honors for the Reds.

It is expected that Manager Stallings will return in time for today's game, but in case he doesn't, Captain Bill Sweeney will take charge of the team. Stallings was called away to Buffalo Saturday night where, it is learned, his wife is very ill.

If there is any possible change, however, Stallings will be on the job. His aggressiveness should be a big help to the team in today's double bill, especially when the Pilgrims have a good chance to close in on the Dodgers.

Joe Tinker will probably resume his position in the Reds' lineup this afternoon. Egan, who has been filling in at short, has done very creditable work, but Tinker

Baseball Chiefs at Locke Funeral

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 18.—The funeral of William H. Locke, president of the Philadelphia National League Baseball club, who died last Thursday was held yesterday at the home of his mother, Mrs. Carrie E. Locke. The services were conducted by Rev. P. S. Pyrion, assistant pastor of Christ Methodist Episcopal Church, of which Mr. Locke was a member.

More than a score of notable baseball men were in attendance, including President Thomas J. Lynch and Secretary John A. Heydler of the National League; Ban B. Johnson, president of the American League, and officials of all the National League clubs.

Tigers Pay $10,000 for Young Pitcher

DETROIT, Aug. 18.—Not to be outdone by other American League Clubs recently reported to have paid large sums for new players, President Navin of the Detroit baseball team has announced the purchase of Pitcher Comstock from the Minneapolis Club of the American Association. He is said to have cost Detroit $10,000 in cash and players. It was not announced what members of the Detroit team will go to Minneapolis in exchange.

Walter Johnson to Demand $12,500

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.—Walter Johnson has made it known through letters to friends that he will demand $12,500 salary next season. The Speed Demon figures that he is of as much value to the Senators as Cobb is to the Tigers, and unless he gets the increase says he will retire from baseball." At present Johnson is drawing $7,500.

The TUNNEL

GREATEST STORY of its kind since JULES VERNE

A heavy stone struck the door of the tonneau just below where he was standing. The next instant another whizzed past his head.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

OVER two hundred miles out under the ocean, three thousand men are at work pushing a great tunnel out under the Atlantic, the most gigantic engineering scheme ever conceived by the brain of man. Rives, the chief engineer of the new work, has just arrived on the scene, after a trip from shore in a tunnel train running over a hundred miles an hour. Suddenly there is an explosion and men and machinery are swept backward by a tremendous blast. Then follows a scene of horror. Rives and a few survivors stumble on foot away from the disaster, and after hours they come into the view of faint lights at main station No. 4.

A train is standing there, but just as the leaders of the survivors reach the steps of the rear car, the train slides out into the tunnel and leaves them screaming and cursing and running in the dark.

The story then goes back to the beginning of the great project. A score of financiers are gathered on the roof of the fifty-two-story Hotel Atlantic, called together by the summons of Lloyd, the master man of money. There, introduced by Rives, McKendree Allan, the inventor, tells them of his great plan to tunnel the Atlantic. "My tunnel," he says, "is going to be 3,100 miles long."

The tunnel city is built on the Jersey plains, and work is pushed at top speed. Twenty thousand men, with great dredgers, push down into the bowels of the earth. Similar scenes are being enacted in Bermuda, Fayal, at Finisterre and on a great plain beyond London. Allan is the moving spirit everywhere. He is almost never at his home in Tunnel City, and his wife tells Rives how deeply she is hurt. Mrs. Allan and Rives find they love one another, and they kiss. He blames himself, but she tells him it could not be helped.

The Riot

WONDERFUL as are our modern means of communication, there is an indefinable older one that is more wonderful still. Or how was it that less than twenty minutes after Harriman had been roused by a telephone message from Hermann—the last before the service was broken—hundreds of men and women in Tunnel City sensed that something was wrong with their mates in the lower workings?

Long before a single crowd had gathered in front of the administration building, and at the entrance to the tubes, and messengers began racing back and forth from one to the other gathering with the latest news.

Harriman had had bad news from his son a few days before. The boy was dying in China of some mysterious tropic fever and he had taken some drug to make him sleep. He jotted down Baermann's brief message, and it was many minutes before he was even partially master of himself. By the time he was ready for definite action an immense crowd, mostly women, had gathered and were demanding news. The first of the trains had reached the surface; but the workmen knew nothing beyond the fact that something was wrong—that every one had dropped work and headed for the trains.

They began calling to him in shrill, angry voices. In Rives' absence he was in supreme command as he was Rives' chief of staff. He told a newly roused clerk to go out and tell the crowd that nothing definite had been learned. They jeered at the young man and he retired in angry dignity; whereupon the crowd began shouting for his chief again.

Harriman went out. There were ignorant and excitable hordes of a dozen different races in the city, and he knew the necessity for keeping them calm. When he stepped out onto the veranda in the gray dawn a respectful silence greeted him. These people had grown to look on the lords of the workings as their actual rulers; but every second's delay was making them uglier, and their quick suspicions were spurring them on.

THE DREAD NEWS

He looked them over and saw that they were almost without exception the wives of the workers.

"I am sorry to have to tell you," he said quietly in English, "that there has been a small explosion in the south gallery. Something went wrong with the drilling machine and it blew up. That is all we know at present, but it is not serious."

There was a low murmur from the crowd as this short speech was swiftly translated into a half-score tongues.

"You mean that is all you want to tell?" cried a woman shrilly. "I wanna know 'bout my husband. Is any of 'em dead?"

The cry was taken up on every hand. Harriman flushed.

"Don't act like a lot of fools," he barked angrily. "We don't know any more about it than you do. Probably there are a few hurt—possibly some dead, but we will do everything we can."

This little show of temper had a quieting influence for a time, and the throng gradually drifted over to the tunnel entrance. And then Harriman began to get messages from along the line that gave him some idea of the frightful character of the disaster and the appalling confusion in the tunnel. But the trains were coming out. He stopped some of the lagging trains as long as he dared, for he knew the swelling mob at the entrance would recognize the stoppage of the inbound traffic as a bad sign. All of the tracks were open for thirty-five miles in. One of them all the way. By shooting trains in to the seventh crossover and bringing them back he kept up an appearance uninterrupted activity that was highly reassuring.

Every man that dropped off of the outbound trains—the real ones and the fake ones—was eagerly surrounded, but they could tell nothing—the early arrivals. They had been on their way out when the explosion occurred—they were working in the first two hundred miles and knew nothing but what they had heard.

Still the crowd waited, staring into the two dark, round openings of the tubes that stared back like two menacing eyes. And about 9 o'clock came the first train from the panic district of the boring. Gray-faced, wild-eyed men flung themselves from the cars before the train had come to a stop.

"The tunnel is burning! All hell's loose! The tunnel's burning!"

The thousands took up the terrible cry, and in ten minutes Tunnel City echoed with it from end to end. Pandemonium broke loose at the entrance. Frantic women dashed hither and yon, screaming the names of their husbands and fathers and sons. Men cursed and shook their fists and reached for hidden weapons. Several women fainted, and here and there were bursts of hysterical laughter. Every man that came off the train was wedged into the centre of a close-packed circle, to which he told, in broken, tremulous phrases, the story of the terrible panic. None knew any of the details of the explosion.

In the midst of this chaos Harriman drove up in his car, waving his hand and shouting. A few hundred gathered around him, and he bellowed at the top of his lungs in a vain effort to make his words carry.

"Cut this out and don't act like fools!" he howled. "Haven't you got sense enough to know that concrete and steel can't burn? There has been a small explosion and a few timbers at the far end of the tunnel have burned and a lot of cowards ran and started all of this. The fire will be out in a short time and you need not"——

A heavy stone struck the door of the tonneau just below where he was standing. The next instant another whizzed past his head. He crouched down, spoke to the chauffeur and the car dashed out the press and purred down the roadway in a shower of stones. He drove madly to Allan's house to see if, by any chance, Mrs. Allan had received anything like a reply to a telegram he had sent as soon as he realized what the accident might develop in the way of complications.

A mob is a great beast. It is without moral courage. Being cowardly, it is harmless until it is feared. Being primitive, it turns to man's primitive weapon—the stone. This is one of the reasons that the streets of modern cities are paved with asphalt.

When the distraught Harriman fled at the first missile the panic and rage of the horde of men and women—especially women—which the habit of respect for the ruling powers had held in check broke loose. A detachment of a few thousand proceeded with a rush to the administration building, where they smashed every window in a dozen seconds. A couple of young engineers appeared at a window above the entrance with a revolver in each hand, and this cooled the desire to enter and seek further vengeance. Another assistant left his blue-prints long enough to phone to Toms River for troops, which were always there in anticipation of just such an outbreak as seemed now certain to occur.

Roaring threats and curses, the fragment of the mob returned to the great seething horde at the tunnel entrance, wrecking the homes of a few of "the bosses" on the way.

Allan's chief of police hastily gathered as many of his men as he could and rushed the mob, but his handful were scattered by the first volley of stones, and knowing how heavily they were outnumbered he was afraid to give orders to fire. An unsuccessful attempt to break up a mob is much worse than no attempt at all, and the flames of destruction roared higher.

Behind these men and women there was no tradition of patriotism, no conception of justice. For generations they had been bred in social injustice of the most terrible kind. Their forefathers had come to America as to a land of promise and liberty, only to find that they had exchanged a comparatively light political slavery for an inhuman industrial one.

SOME MEN.

Some men do not get all that is coming to them. Lucky devils!

Some men have no idea what they desire until someone else gets it—this applies equally to wives and motor cars.

Some men say nothing about others—unless they know something bad.

Some men keep their past so carefully in front of them that their future lies behind.

Some men would gladly embrace Opportunity, but they could never find the keyhole to the door of her home—even if you handed them the key.

The Summer sun on everyone
Shines down—we would not have it so;
We think we long for sleighbell's song,
And pine for joys of ice and snow.
Dear Summer days! Await your praise—
We eulogize you now, but please remember
Verse on "July" the Monthless boy
About the first of next December.

* * *

A good way to be happy is never to want the moon, but to live with proportionate earnestness all the little mouthfuls that fall on you.

If you doubt yourself, you will accomplish little enough to confirm it!

There are millions of things on earth one may be, and if Fate has locked the gate to the road you want to travel, try another path. Maybe it isn't half so hot and dusty.

MAIDEN MEDITATIONS

Fancy might be a charming life companion if you could get a divorce from her sister, Fact.

Coming events may cast their shadows before, but most of us go unwarned because we are looking backward.

"I would live long enough to know
The worth and fairness of my foe—
But never long enough to say
One was my friend but yesterday."

"I would live long enough to wring
New laughter from old blundering;
But never long enough to find
That age left all of tears behind."

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DON'T BE DISCOURAGED

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young man of nineteen, and every morning on my way to work I meet a girl whom I would like very much to know, but we have no mutual friends, and I am at a loss as to how to accomplish an introduction. She works at the same place I do, but I don't know in what department.

I show her every courtesy, and sometimes she favors me with a smile, but I am still as far from an introduction as when I first saw her. G. H. T.

AN introduction is always best. It is what you would insist upon for your sister, isn't that true?

I am sure in time you will find a mutual friend, but if one does not appear, and you are satisfied in your own heart that you will never give her cause for regretting your acquaintance, say "Good morning" next time you meet. A closer acquaintance will develop.

DON'T APOLOGIZE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am nineteen and in love with a young man two years my senior. Recently he saw me going to a ball with another man, and he got angry. He did not go. Since that time he does not speak to me and goes with other girls to make me jealous. I don't take any notice of him, but I really love him. He has told a friend of mine that if I apologized, he would speak to me. I am not engaged to him and am too proud to think of apologizing for such a foolish thing. ANXIOUS.

YOU have done nothing for which an apology is necessary, and a girl who begins by being humble has to keep it up.

Continue in your present attitude, and if he loves you enough to be worth having he will be the one to apologize. If not, then do not spoil your pretty face by worrying. The right man will come day come along.

"BUT I will tell you, responded the other frankly. "I am not much in the habit of mixing in police matters and I had a natural disinclination to put myself forward. So I let the affair go by. But conscience was too much for me at last. I took my information to the superintendent of police, and he sent me here. That is the history of the matter."

"I accept it," was Mr. Gryce's response, "and I only ask you to be as careful in the future as in the past. Let these facts be considered as ours alone, sir."

"I would be very happy to do this, but unfortunately I was more ready to speak to my friends than I was to the officers of the law. Several members of my club know what I have just told you, and while this is to be regretted, perhaps, it is also the real cause of my being here. For it was in my talk to them that I was led to see the harm which might ensue upon my silence. I will talk no more about it in the future, however."

"And I will be much obliged," remarked Mr. Gryce.

As soon as possible after he had dismissed his visitor the detective went down to police headquarters. He had a talk with the superintendent and that same day at an hour when he knew he should find Dr. Molesworth at home he went to see him with a writ of arrest in his pocket.

The Darkening Cloud.

A SQUARE, dull looking room with two dim windows facing a high brick wall; a large table covered with phials, boxes of instruments, writing materials and a few books; a black haircloth sofa and two chairs; a dingy carpet and a ceiling which has been unwhitened for years; at the table and confronting the only bright thing in the room, a hard coal fire, the stern, immovable figure of a man buried in the deepest thought. Such is Julius Molesworth's office and such the appearance of Julius Molesworth himself on the afternoon of this his most momentous day.

But first, what is he brooding over? Such intentness and absorption argue the existence of some heavy subject on his mind.

The opportunity of his life was before him, and he felt bound to improve it. Was he meditating upon this case and determining just what his course of treatment should be, as he sat there before the fire? His gradually lightening brow seemed to say yes, and the startling terror with which he suddenly broke the spell which bound him and arose told of a secret found rather than of a secret

"Yes, it is—," he cried, "—in small but oft repeated doses. I would willingly stake my life upon it." And raising his head, he suddenly discerned in the looking-glass which hung opposite him over the mantelpiece a face turned toward him from the open door, which though quiet and composed in every feature, had yet that something in it which tells the observer that, expected or unexpected, the hour has come, and the hopes which he has cherished are vainer than the vainest show.

THE ARREST

He saw this face, I say, but he did not at once turn. He had a shock to get over, a course to be resolved upon. When he did turn, it was with courtesy and a slight show of surprise. "Excuse me," said he, "I do not receive patients at this hour."

"I am not a patient," returned Mr. Gryce.

The doctor gazed slowly round his room He did not love it, but it held his all, and there was not an object within it but spoke to his soul of some cherished ambition or secret all-absorbing wish.

"But you have some business! I recollect your face, but I cannot place you."

"My face is of no account; my business is. Dr. Molesworth, you are a physician of an unreleasing school; the fewest words will answer with you. I am an officer armed with a warrant, and I have come to arrest you as the suspected murderer of Mildred Farley.

The doctor, who had been standing with his back to the table, turned slightly and took up a paper lying there. There were a few words written on it, and he read them before he gave the detective that slight bow which was his only answer to this dread announcement.

"I am charged with placing you in custody," continued the detective; "but if there is anything you wish to do ——"

"I would like a half-hour," the doctor responded firmly. "I have a case"—his voice broke; he turned to his desk and sat down. "Don't interrupt me," he said, laying down the paper he held and taking up his pen. "I have some memoranda to make. They are important—a matter of life and death to one poor woman."

"Write," said the detective; "I am no gabbler."

And Dr. Molesworth wrote, calmly, thoughtfully, with entire absorption in his subject, or so it seemed to the eye who saw all, though it dwelt only on a phial marked "Poison" that stood on the doctor's table. Nor did that same eye detect any break in the extraordinary calmness when, the last word written, the physician turned and handing him the paper said:

"It will probably prove unintelligible to you, but it can be easily read by any physician. Keep it till I ask you for it."

Then he turned again to his table and wrote three or four letters, all of which he handed over to the other for inspection before sealing and directing them. When all this was done he rose and, confronting the detectives, observed:

"Now I am ready to go with you. The question is where will you take me? You have arrested me on a suspicion of murder; for this you must have had good reasons, better reasons than appeared at the inquest, or you would not have delayed this arrest. I will not question them. I will only say that your evidence against me is circumstantial, must be, since I did not do this deed; and as circumstantial evidence is never absolute proof, you are doing me a great injustice by this action, and my patients an irreparable harm. But you are not the principal in this matter and I will not argue with you concerning my innocence, but only ask one favor in return for the possible wrong you do me. This is the privilege of a short interview with a person I am willing to name and whom I only desire to see in your presence and if you wish, in your hearing."

"And may I inquire who this person is?" returned Mr. Gryce.

"A physician and a friend of mine; Dr. Walter Cameron, of No. —— Fifth avenue."

"But Dr. Cameron is out of town; he has gone with his bride to Washington, and I do not think he has yet returned."

A shadow passed over the other's stern face.

"I must see him, nevertheless," he insisted. "You have not yet shown me your warrant. Consider me as in a sense under your surveillance merely and go with me to Washington. You will not regret it. Then seeming to comprehend the unreasonableness of what he asked, he added, "You are following the commands of a superior; let me see him."

"You shall, but do you object to telling me what you want of Dr. Cameron?"

Julius Molesworth's face lighted up, a gleam flashed from that strange eye of his and he looked almost handsome.

"I could not make you understand, but did you ever have any great ambition?" he suddenly asked, with rather a doubtful look at the elderly and somewhat benevolent countenance before him.

Mr. Gryce smiled.

"You may talk to me as if I had had," he rejoined.

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

"I GOT a notice to go and learn to be a trained nurse," said the Manicure Lady. "I was just reading this morning about another rich man that married the girl that nursed him back from the valley of death into a life of love and light, or whatever it was the reporter wrote about the wedding. That's a pretty soft graft, George, it seems to me, to nurse a old millionaire back from the valley for a few years or so, or even long enough for to marry him and have his will made proper.

"This manicure game is getting on my nerves, George. The way I came to get into it at all was because I used to read how some rich Westerner came East to do things up and fell in with some girl which had did his nails and married her. So I got into the game and have kept my lamps trimmed and burning ever since, looking for a guy with a slouch hat and a breezy way about him, but nix. They just ain't come, that's all. Either all the rich Westerners is married off or they have some new style."

"You ought to take pride in your calling," said the Head Barber. "A girl hadn't ought to take up a profession as noble as yours just with the idea of meeting somebody that she could marry for money. There ain't no class to that. I would feel ashamed if I was in your place."

"I don't see how I can take no pride in this profession no more," said the Manicure Lady. "The men that comes in here don't care whether they get a artistic manicure or not, if you can beam on them and let them think they are regular Romeos. I don't know why it is, but all the lovemakers in the whole city, from fresh kids to beauty old goats, learn words of love out of the novels and then practice them on us manicure girls. I know every way to propose that was ever framed up, George, and every sweet nothing that a guy with nothing in his head ever stole out of a book. The gent that marries me will be a wonder, and if he wins me it won't be with no new words or expressions, because I know them all. There ain't nothing new for me to hear from the lips of a man in love, George. It makes me feel kind of sad sometimes, too. I often wish I could be a little shop girl and have the shop owner's son come along with his automobile and win me with his flow of words."

"Some of them rich men's sons talk pretty smooth," said the Head Barber.

"It might sound smooth to you or to a shop girl," replied the Manicure Lady, "but it's all old tripe to me. Why, if a few of words was to win me I would have married Joe Blow, the bookmaker, long ago. Joe has traveled extensive, and his flow of words reminds me of a brook flowing over a lot of pebbles. But you can't live and keep house on a flow of words, George, and since racing has went on the frits Joe couldn't make enough to keep me in that station of life to which I am accustomed to. No, I guess I will have to get out of this game and try being a trained nurse. Wilfred used to go with one, and she made so much money that the poor boy wouldn't propose to her for fear she would think he was marrying her for her money. It's kind of nice to comfort the sick, too.

"If I was you I wouldn't change my vocation now," advised the Head Barber. "A girl as sweet as you is sure to get a grand husband some day."

"I don't know, George," sighed the Manicure Lady. "The world is full of sweet girls, but it takes a heroine to land a grand husband."

POOR FELLOW

Sergeant Barker was in a bad temper, consequently the recruits under instruction were having a hard time of it.

The squad had to "about turn" so many times in a few seconds that it was no wonder the recruits got dizzy, and Smudger Smiff finished up by turning about the wrong way.

Sergeant Barker got in a towering rage, and, striding up to the Smudge, roared:

"Where the dickens do you reckon yourself to be, eh? On parade, or what?"

"Well, sergeant," replied Smudger meekly, "I began to think I was at a fancy-dress ball dressed up as a bloomin' leg o' mutton, and twisting round and round on a meat-jack."

Lupus Worst Form of Skin Diseases

Here is a Home Treatment that Overcomes even Worst Cases.

Lupus or any other Skin Disease will go Skulking Away if you use S. S. S.

A tiny pimple spreads to the side of the face and often covers the cheek and bridge of the nose. It is very destructive to the tissues of the skin. No external treatments will overcome it, as the cause of lupus is from impurities in the blood supply. The only known method of cure is to get the blood supply under the control of S. S. S., the famous blood specific. Its action is quite remarkable and has direct influence upon the network of small blood vessels and glands in the skin.

Not one drop of minerals or drugs is used in its preparation. Ask for S. S. S. and insist upon having it. The Dances of Today

By EVELYN NESBIT THAW

"The tango," says Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, "is, when properly danced, graceful, modest and pretty."

The illustrations to Mrs. Thaw's article show her dancing the tango with her dancing partner, Jack Clifford, and she believes that they bear out what she says.

At the left, in the upper picture, is shown the beginning of the dance, as Mrs. Thaw and Mr. Clifford dance it. The partners face forward and are sufficiently apart to retain the grace and individuality that each should display.

The picture above, at the right, showing another position in the dance, Mrs. Thaw considers one of the best defences possible of the modern school of the art, and she adds that there are many steps equally graceful, pretty and modest.

At the right Mrs. Thaw appears in a little exercise preliminary to the dance itself, which she considers wisdom to practice, since it makes for supppleness and grace.

These pictures were especially posed for this page.

IS the modern style of dancing really dancing, or vulgarity and acrobatics set to music?

You hear the question on every side, with the implied criticism of turkey trotting and tangoing in every syllable of the questions.

Modern dancing is really dancing—and I propose to speak in its defence, but I shall divide dancing into two classes, and each class must be kept in its own place. There is stage dancing, which appeals for greater freedom than ballroom dancing should dream of taking. Stage dancing may combine athletics and acrobatics, and a bit of contortion, all duly mingled with the poetry of motion. Ballroom dancing should be far more conservative—should be, and sometimes is not.

Now, years ago, when the waltz first came into vogue, it had many enemies who considered it vulgar, indecent and wellnigh impossible to allow in respectable places—the poor, dear, conservative little waltz that is allowed by all the people who would scarcely dare to look at a turkey trot today!

But the turkey trot is in its infancy—and here be it said that it is a very hale and hearty infant, and when properly brought up and educated, will grow into a very charming youth.

I have given time and interest to the study of the modern dance, and through these columns I hope to bring about a better knowledge and understanding of the beautiful steps and postures, the enjoyable motion and gliding that is so much misunderstood and that is maligned, as are all misunderstood things.

The turkey trot and the tango, and the better variations of both are beautiful dances in their time and place. But the time is not 5 in the afternoon, and the place is not the "Dansant" or "Tango Tea."

The Tango Tea is a menace to young girls. Parents who take the proper interest in their children can keep them at home and out of dance halls (opened with the second vowel if you prefer), at night. But of course young girls have to be allowed a certain amount of freedom in the day, and many a sixteen-year-old child drifts out of the pure air into the drink-and-dance atmosphere of the Tango Tea at five in the afternoon.

Apart from stage dancing, which is meant "for to admire and for to see," there is modern dancing for every one. The place is the home or the private ballroom, and the time is an evening of pleasant relaxation and healthy exercise.

The first thing to consider in ballroom dancing, as I am going to call it, is position. The turkey trot and tango should be danced with the partners a foot apart. These dances must allow for freedom of motion and individual expression, and to be graceful as well as modest they demand room for each partner to move about easily.

First, then, start a foot apart, with the man's open right palm firmly held at the centre of the girl's waist in back. The girl's left hand is just below the man's right shoulder, with her arm parallel to his; and the girl's right arm is loosely held over the man's left forearm, which is held tense from the bent elbow.

This position allows for free motion and careful guidance that will make for unity of moving without any jerks or jolts. And is not the position modest, even more modest than the now generally accepted and allowed waltz position?

The next great rule for the turkey trotter is: Keep your feet on the floor, glide, glide all the time; don't bounce or bob, wriggle or sway in the objectionable fashion of people who do not understand the modern school of dancing, but dance at it. Keep your feet on the floor and do not shrug your shoulders; just glide along in a near-walking step—your feet on the floor and your body in a continuous line, with shoulders held even.

Follow the rule as to position, gliding feet and unshrugged shoulders, and at once the objectionable features of the new dance that has swept the country and has given every one the stimulus of enjoyable exercise will be eliminated. But the modern dance is far more than elimination—it is careful selection, and from day to day I am going to show you carefully selected and posed figures and to tell you how to practice them, so that you may dance with the precession and be a turkey trot and tango expert.

Today I am showing you a little stretching exercise that it will be wise for you to practice, of suppleness and grace, before you start doing the steps which Mr. Clifford and I will picture for you.

Next consider the tango step, danced for stage purposes only. The step itself is pretty and simple, partners facing forward, man's right and girl's left foot slightly raised, but the close "embracing" position must change for ballroom usage.

The third picture in the next defense I know for the modern school of dancing. It is not graceful, modest and pretty? I hope soon to teach all of you many steps that belong in just the same category with this step—and I hope that all my long-distance pupils will be able to do steps and whole dances that take their place in the same class with this graceful little near-minuet dip-step.

FRESH FROM SCHOOL

The following are some of the answers recently given at a school where the headmaster is fond of setting "general knowledge" papers:

The seasons of the year are so named from the time of the year in which they occur.

Climate is different variations of weather.

Charles Dickens was born and brought up in London shortly after the death of his parents.

Gravitation is when an apple falls on the floor.

Benjamin Franklin invented lighting.

The place where they keep all kinds of wild animals is called a theological garden.

Martin Luther invented a diet of worms.

One of the most important inventions of modern times is the North Pole.

FRECKLES

Now Is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots.

There is no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as the prescription othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots.

Simply get an ounce of othine—double strength—from Riker-Jaynes Drug Co., Houghton & Dutton Drug Dept. and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than an ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful, clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double strength othine as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

What Would YOU Do?

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"DISCOURAGED" writes: "I am in love with a young man whom I love dearly. He tells me he loves me, and I always tell him I don't believe it, and sometimes he acts indifferent to me. Will you tell me how I can prove that he is really in love with me, as I love him dearly?"

Want would you say to a girl who loves, and is loved, and who meets the messenger every girl longs for with skepticism and doubt?

Wouldn't you, remembering the happiness that came to you through a love you accepted, or the dreariness of life where love was rejected, urge her to have faith? I do.

This from a man: "I have been in love with a girl of my age for some time. I stopped keeping company with her some time ago, and lost her love. Now I want to win it back again."

Would you dare, remembering the sweetheart your stubbornness lost you, advise him to hunt a new love? I wouldn't.

I want him to go to her humbly and sincerely and tell her he has discovered that he didn't know his own heart; that he knows it now, and knows that so long as he lives it will long for her and best term for her, if only she will forgive him and take him back. Then I want him to act like a man and be true to his word.

A girl writes: "I am in love with a young man, and he professes to love me. We have been keeping company since last October, but trust me he will not. He always thinks I am with other men when not with him. He seems to think a great deal of me when he is with me. When there are other girls present he likes to tease me by making a lot of them."

CERTAINLY NOT

Would you advise her to marry a man who gives every proof of being a jealous tyrant? I wouldn't.

He reserves for himself the right to flirt with other girls, enjoying himself because it "teases" her, and excuses her of spending every moment when not in his company with other men. I want her to love and to marry; it is the only lasting happiness there is in life; but I don't want her to marry a man who will make her life miserable with his unjust suspicions and reproaches. ...ere is peace in spinsterhood; there would be nothing but war with such a man.

Bill writes: "I am a young man of twenty-three and in love with a girl of eighteen. Every time I call on her her mother says she is out. Do you think this girl loves me?"

Would you, with dreamy eyes, build up a romance: Loving girl, stern parent, perhaps a dungeon in which the girl is locked to keep her from her lover. I wouldn't.

If she loved him she would be "in some time when he calls. No mother was ever clever enough to send a young man away from the door time after time without a chance to see the girl he loves unless she had the girl's consent. I am sorry for Bill, but I am quite sure the girl doesn't love him.

A very young girl sends the following: "I am in love with a young man two and a half years my senior. My parents say that I am too young to keep company with him. I am seventeen. They tell me to wait two years. What shall I do?"

Would you urge her to defy the best friends she has in the world? I wouldn't. I want her to remember that two years is a very short time compared with a lifetime she will give to the man if she marries him. She owes that much, and more, to the two who have cared for her all her life and who stand ready to continue that protection, if need be, till the end of their days.

An easily discouraged soul writes: "I am deeply infatuated with a girl of my own age who is wealthy, and I am not. She is also receiving the attention of a young man who is also wealthy. He has more time and money to spend on her than I have, and she says she can't decide which one she likes the more. What shall I do? I do not want to waste her time and mine. It would be very hard for me to give her up."

Would you, made skeptical perhaps by some bitter experience, advise him to get out of the race, telling him that no man stands a show when his empty hands are opposed to hands that are filled with money? I wouldn't.

LOVE INDEPENDENT

I insist that love is independent of wealth, and that he stands as good a chance as his wealthy rival. The other man's wealth will never defeat him, if he loses it will be because of his own faint heart, and his fear that by continuing to make love to the girl he will waste "her time and mine." I have no patience with such a weak-willed person!

Bessie also has troubles. She writes: "I have been keeping company with a young man for nearly two years, and I love him very much. He has never come right out and asked me to marry him, but some way or other we have just drifted into talking about it, and we expect to be married in the Fall. Now, what I don't understand is why he has never said anything about an engagement ring. He never goes with other girls, nor wants me to go with other young men, nor do I care to. He has given me some beautiful presents, but never a ring."

Would you urge her to grow indignant, and demand it? I wouldn't.

Happiness is not dependent on a band for the girl's finger. If it had been, there would have been little happiness in the world some years ago, when engagement rings were unknown, and many a happy bride was married with a key as the marriage symbol.

There are some men who never think. This man didn't think to propose. He just drifted into the engagement, and in the same happy way will drift to the altar. I am sure the thought of a ring has not entered his head. I am also sure that if Bessie goes about it right, by suggesting instead of by knocking, he will visit the jeweler before long again.

Don't you think that would be wiser than to frighten love away with angry reproaches? I do.

The Ether Theory

By EDGAR LUCIEN LARKIN.

Q. —"Is the ether theory necessary for explanation of magnetic lines of force, the flow of electric currents through conductors, and the forces of gravity? Is it not possible that some of the substance of the magnets passes out and through space?"

A.—The passage of magnetism, heat, light, or any other phase of radiant energy from suns through space seems to require the presence of ether in all space and within all matter.

In all problems of space-energy-transmission, the ablest mathematicians have formulated equations seeking to discover properties of an ether that will convey light waves varying in length between inche of 23,000 and 63,000 to one inch, with set specific speed of 186,380 miles per second; and with rates of oscillation ranging from 423 trillion for low red to 739 trillion per second for high violet. The results of the computations are diverse, varying in reduced densities from millions of times less than hydrogen to the enormous density of "2,000 million times that of lead," according to J. J. Thomson.

I heard this great scientist, the discoverer of the base of nature, electrons, say this. But this density of ether, he stated, was that immediately surrounding electrons. The question comes in here with great significance. Thus, if electrons are shot from the sun with known velocity of light, and they supply gas, then the density of ether exceedingly close to the dying particle is of this enormous degree. This deduction does not refer to the density of ether in space when at absolute rest, it can be quiescent. It may be millions of times rarer than hydrogen. This is unknown, for the most refined experiments ever made, those by Michelson, failed utterly to detect the existence of ether.

All that is known is that the space surrounding an electron is an elastic fluid whose intensity is powerful beyond all imagination. These are a few arguments for ether. The question is, "Do not particles fly from magnets?" This may never be known, for let 1,000,000 electrons per second escape from an ordinary steel magnet during 1,000,000 years, then only instruments of precision could detect the loss.

Nothing whatever is known of the real nature of gravitation, so that part of the query cannot be replied to. Gravitation is supposed to be electrical, however. So is everything, for that matter.

GOOD TIP.

"Everything all right, sir?" asked the waiter.

The diner nodded, but still the waiter hovered near.

"Steak cooked to suit you sir?" he asked again, presently.

Again the diner nodded.

"Potatoes the way you like 'em, sir?"

"Yes."

Another period of silence.

"I hope the service is satisfactory, sir?"

"Are you asking for a tip?" demanded the diner.

"Well, sir, of course we get the tips sometimes, and I've got to go to the kitchen for another party to——"

"So you'd like the tip now, to be sure of it? Well, I'll give you one."

"Yes, sir."

"Here is the tip: I have a powerful voice that I am capable of using. If anything is wrong I'll let out a roar. If you do not hear from me you can know that I am dining in peace and comfort and not in the least regretting your absence. So it's no fun to have to pass verbal judgment on every mouthful I eat."

"But the tip?"

"That's the tip, and a mighty good one it is, too."

LATEST FROM TODAY'S STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor.

Stocks advanced today after a firm opening. A number of mining issues made good gains in Boston. When the morning was half over a recession included New Haven 3/8, Butte & Superior 1/4, Calumet & Arizona 1, Granby 3/4, North Butte 1/2, Isle Royale 1/2 and Alaska Gold 3/8. United Shoe common was up 1 1/8.

New York held early gains well and as trading progressed that market grew stronger. Early in the session hour Chesapeake & Ohio was up 3/4, Canadian Pacific 1/8, Northern Pacific 3/8, Southern Pacific 1/8, Union Pacific 1, Reading 1/4, Lehigh Valley 1 1/4, American Can common 3/8, Steel 1/4, Amalgamated 1, General Electric 2 1/4, St. Paul 1/8, Texas Co. 1/8, and Westinghouse 1.

New York Market Opens Higher.

The rise which marked the close of last week was resumed when the New York market opened this morning, all the usual speculative leaders showing gains. The improvement was narrow in most instances at the start, although St. Paul was up 1 1/4. At the end of a half hour Union Pacific and Amalgamated were up a point each and St. Paul had increased its rise by a trifle. Reading, Steel, Erie and Chesapeake & Ohio were among the issues which lost advances.

At the opening in London prices had been pushed, but there was an improvement as soon as consols rebound and American stocks were above New York parity. Canadian Pacific was firm there and sentiment in general was confident.

Corn Crop Outlook Bad.

It is estimated that during the first two weeks in August growing corn deteriorated at least 300,000,000 bushels and that the total crop will be under 2,000,000,000. Losses in corn producing States are as follows: Iowa, 91,000,000 bushels; Missouri, 84,000,000; Illinois, 80,000,000 bushels. The crop in Kansas hit hardest by the combined drought and heat, is 154,000,000 bushels below figures. Except for a 40,000,000 bushel yield in the eastern part of the State the corn crop this year is an utter failure. Fortunately, corn is not the State's major crop.

According to weather forecasters there is no heavy rain in sight for today in the parched territory. Forecasts read:

North Dakota, unsettled, with local thunder showers, Monday and Tuesday.

Kansas, fair Monday.

Oklahoma, generally fair Monday and Tuesday.

Missouri, fair Monday, Tuesday probably fair.

Arkansas, fair Monday.

Ohio, unsettled Monday, local thunder showers.

Indiana, unsettled, probably local showers southern portion, cooler northern portion.

Says Currency Bill Will Pass.

Although Democratic leaders all say that the Administration currency bill will pass the House there is enough opposition to it as it stands to make them think it wise to make statements. Speaker Champ Clark is the latest to do so. He answers objections that it will not do enough for the farmer, by saying:

What will be secured is among the good features of the bill are many agricultural amendments as I represent is the fact that it makes provision in the savings department for loans on improved farming lands, a beneficial thing for national banks; another is the fact that it will tend to keep the people's money at home, so much of it in one place, so much of it in another place, and so on. It will enhance that it provides for the loaning of the bank deposits for purposes of speculation in stocks and bonds, but that can be met by governmental control of the national banking system.

It is objected that it confers too much power on the Federal Reserve Board. I never had much confidence in the ability of any banking board to fix government loan in private banks. I have confidence in the Federal Reserve Board, the power, wisdom and patriotism with which the Federal Reserve Board will fix rates of interest and discharges its important duties. Consequently, as any President during the life of the people and in behalf of his own time, he will appoint men who will be in harmony with the views of the Federal Reserve Board and will keep them close watch on them so that all the people may be treated impartially and our prosperity increase.

It is impossible that any President will ever be so base or regard his own good name so little as to appoint men to that board commissioned to his keeping by the Glass-Owen currency bill.

May Need More Tariff Votes.

Tariff reform leaders would be better pleased if the Democratic majority in the Senate could be greater when the tariff bill comes up for passage. According to rumor there is fear that Senator Newlands will not support it, and Senator Culberson is ill. Senators Ransdell and Thornton of Louisiana, who are against free sugar, have declared their intention to bolt, it is said.

But Senator Simmons, chairman of the Finance Committee, says Culberson will be able to return to Washington in time to vote and that he has no doubt Senator Newlands will line up with his party at the crucial moment.

"But," says a Washington dispatch, "despite the encouraging talk of Senator Simmons, there are distinct evidences of uneasiness among the Democrats. Senator Newlands is the most independent of all the members of the party.

Republican Senators believe the bill will pass. They are not building hopes upon Democratic disaffection defeating it. They are of the opinion that its practical operation will be discovered by the political sense to the Democratic party. For this reason some of them are gratified that it is as modified as it is."

Securities Situation Abroad.

American stocks were the most important on the Berlin bourse last week and excepting Baltimore & Ohio all worked lower. Canadian Pacific, however, was strong. The weakness of the New York market during the last half of the week hurt Americans in Europe. The immediate money outlook is not encouraging to Berlin speculators. They expect a 7 per cent. rate next month. Among the unfavorable aspects is threatened labor trouble in the mining districts.

Stock trading was dull in Paris before the market closed for a three-day holiday.

In London speculation has been aided by prospect of easier money. The Bank of England, which made a remarkably good statement last week, has been accumulating gold fast. On Thursday last it reported having $500,000 more gold than it had a corresponding time last year. The gain can be appreciated when it is stated that at the beginning of July the Bank had $16,725,000 less in gold than at the same 1912 period.

London Copper Quotations.

The London copper warrants market opened the week steady, spot being up 1s 3d and futures 3s 9d.

Fortnightly foreign statistics show that European stocks of copper, including Hamburg, Rotterdam and Bremen, had decreased 113 tons on August 15, while supplies afloat decreased 3,849 tons, making the total decrease 3,962. On August 15 the visible foreign supply totaled 30,340 tons, compared with 34,300 on July 31.

It is reported from the lake that labor conditions are improving, but that production will be limited for some time. Calumet & Hecla is closing some shafts, expecting that the work will be reduced for a long time.

Striking electrical workers at Butte have offered to submit difference to arbitration.

Financial News in Brief.

For the first half of this year the gross receipts of the Grand Trunk Railway increased £351,300 and the gain in net was £137,000.

There is talk in financial circles that in the future railway bonds will be issued in small denominations, and that $100 will be a favorite amount.

The total value of the exports from the United States to Canada in the fiscal year 1913 was $411,000,000, against $216,000,000 in 1910. The gain for the single year 1912-13 was $85,000,000—a larger increase than in any earlier year.

The Bank of Germany reports for the week a gain in cash of 28,722,000 marks.

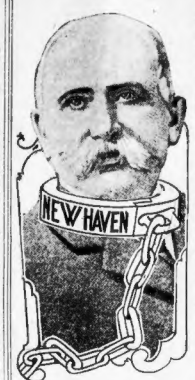
REP. MICHAEL KELLEY OF SALEM



This is a Democratic Representative in the Massachusetts Legislature. Mr. Kelley voted to give the New Haven Railroad control of more than half the street railways in Massachusetts. In doing so, he violated his pledge to the people contained in the Democratic platform, which said: "WE ARE OPPOSED TO THE OWNERSHIP OR CONTROL OF OUR STREET RAILWAYS BY THE STEAM RAILROADS, AND BELIEVE THAT IT SHOULD GO NO FARTHER IN THIS COMMONWEALTH." He defied his Governor. He ignored the warnings of the Public Franchise League, the Chamber of Commerce, the Tax Commissioner, the Railroad Commission and the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Mark this man well at the next primary and election. Ask him if he voted for the bill in the interest of his State.

If he says he did, then ask him if the State is served best by serving the New Haven, when its demands are opposed to the whole public welfare.

If you want to elect Representatives who prefer the wishes of great corporations to the public weal, you will return this man to the Legislature. If you want to elect men who serve the Democratic party and who have the interest of the people at heart, you will choose some one else.

If you will send us your name and address we will help the people's fight to defeat Mr. Kelley.

CASSIDY LAUDS PENNSYLVANIA'S STORAGE LAWS

Read how far behind Massachusetts is in its gure food laws. Mr. Cassidy tells you today of the Pennsylvania law which went into effect last week. It is the best law in existence. It protects the consumer and lowers the cost of living.

BY HARRY P. CASSIDY.

The gamblers in food stuffs who have used cold storage to raise the price of foods received a body blow when the Pennsylvania cold storage law went into effect recently.

Primarily it protects the consumer. Most important it affects retail food dealers loading up with eggs, butter, etc., when they are most plentiful and dealing them out in times of scarcity in quantities small enough to keep up prices.

Under this law the large quantities of eggs stored in April and May, the busy time of year, will be forced on the market in January and February, the scarcest season.

There's no chance of a dealer fooling the consumer under this law. You know it's enough here to have a little egg called "cold storage Goods Sold Here" tucked away up under the ceiling in some place the consumer never sees it.

The time limit is months, fixed for all foods, as follows: Beef, 4; pork, 6; sheep, 6; lamb, 6; veal, 3; dressed fowl, drawn, 5; dressed fowl undrawn, 8; eggs, 8; butter, 9; fish, 5.

The new bill, introduced by William H. Wilson of Philadelphia, and known as the Wilson bill, provides:

A time limit for every article in cold storage.

That the date of entry in any cold storage plant and the date of removal shall be stamped on every article for the inspection of the retail buyer.

That food once withdrawn from cold storage houses shall not be replaced therein.

That no food kept in storage in other states shall be sold in Pennsylvania.

That all storage firms shall make a quarterly report to the dairy and food commissioner as to the kind and quantities of food then in storage. The penalty for violation of the act is $500 for the first offense and $1,000, or thirty to ninety days' imprisonment or both, for the second and subsequent offences.

"Uncle Joe" Plans to Run Again

CHICAGO, Aug 18.—Ex-Speaker Joseph G. Cannon and all of the other defeated Illinois Republican congressmen in the June-November election are planning a huge "comeback" party in 1914. Those who went down with Cannon in Democratic landslide and who will seek vindication include Congressmen-nebide William B. McKinley, George E. Foss, brother of Governor Foss of Massachusetts, and others.

Occasionally "Capital" Discovers That "Labor" Really Is a Factor in National Life

Chicago, Looking Around for 8,000 Vanished Mechanics, Makes the Discovery Just at Present

Copyright, 1913, by the Star Company.

Chicago had a lockout of workmen in the building trades.

It was decided by those engaged in building that something must be done, and so all building was stopped for a while, builders agreeing to stand the loss in order to carry their point.

Finally building was resumed and something strange and surprising happened. IT WAS DISCOVERED THAT 8,000 BUILDING MECHANICS WERE MISSING IN CHICAGO.

And the builders, anxious to rush through the work that had been delayed during the lockout, did not know exactly WHERE to get the eight thousand mechanics.

Those eight thousand mechanics had not been sitting around waiting for the lockout to end, but had gone to other cities and engaged in other occupations.

This discovery is useful, since it makes clear the fact that in this country and in its enterprises organized labor actually plays a part that is not to be disregarded.

The builders discover that their architects, their draftsmen their enterprise and their MONEY amount to very little if they haven't got the workers to make realities of the ideas, the plans, the enterprise and the money.

Perhaps it is a good thing to have the eight thousand mechanics missing for a little while, just to teach the gentlemen who occasionally imagine that they are the entire nation that they wouldn't be very much more important than Robinson Crusoe on his island if they didn't have the workmen with them.

The absence of these mechanics is also interesting as demonstrating the value of labor unions that keep an organized body of workers ready to do the skilled work of the country upon demand.

The country has grown too big for the old system under which both labor and capital were disorganized, with the capitalist, when the mood seized him, deciding to build something, going out looking for isolated workers, gathering them together and putting them to building.

Today capital is organized AND OUGHT TO BE ORGANIZED UNDER PUBLIC CONTROL AND REASONABLE CONDITIONS.

And labor is organized and ought to be organized, also under public control and reasonable conditions.

The Chicago lesson teaches that if labor were NOT organized, if the unions did not, by demanding fair wages and fair hours, limiting apprentices and preventing oversupply, regulate conditions, the labor market would be chaotic and the great operations of this day impossible.

If the lack of mechanics in Chicago teaches capital the importance of labor and teaches also the important fact that organized labor makes great building and manufacturing possible, the hardship of the Chicago lockout will not have been endured entirely in vain.

Congressman Murray Should Press His Order for an Inquiry Into the Control of Coal Mines by the Railroads

The people of this country during the coming Winter may have good reason to thank Mayor Fitzgerald and Congressman Murray for the demand which they have made for a Congressional inquiry concerning the control of the coal mines by the railroads. The price of hard coal in this country during the last few years has been a terrible hardship not only to the poor among us, but even to the moderately well-to-do.

The people of Pennsylvania long ago recognized the danger of permitting the railroads which ran to the mouths of the coal mines and upon which the mines were dependent to transport the coal to the market to own or control these mines.

Therefore, Pennsylvania incorporated into her Constitution a prohibition against the railroads owning coal mines. This is the very highest form of prohibition which governments have yet devised. But the railroads have paid no more attention to the Constitution of the Sovereign State of Pennsylvania than one of its locomotives would mind a dog on the railroad track.

A Congressional investigation lets in light. It calls public attention to the truth. It makes the guilty men ashamed of themselves. It makes the guilty, slothful, cowardly, faithless public officials afraid and stirs them into action. This Congressional investigation of the coal monopoly by these lawless railroads ought to prove of great advantage. If it is put into motion at once, we may have some good results before the Winter sets in. Let Congressman Murray press his order to investigate.

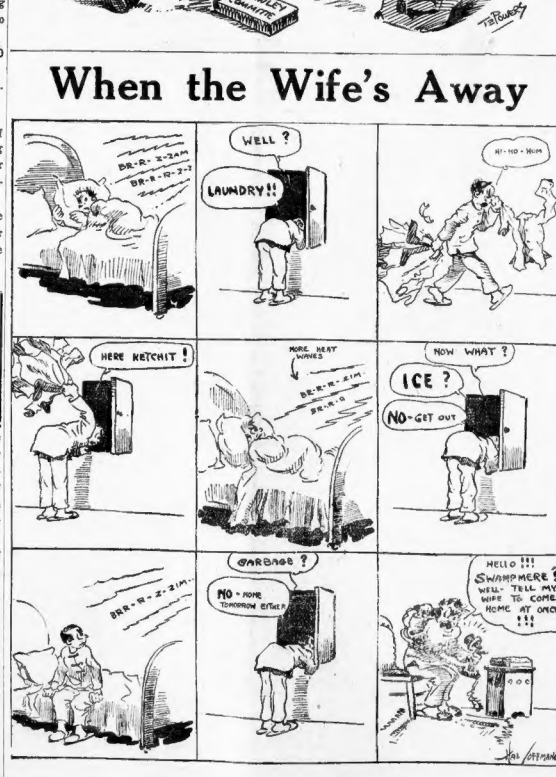
When the Wife's Away



The funniest pictures by the cleverest comic artists and the most laugh provoking stories by the foremost humorists of today—these are what you find in the great City Life Section of the Boston Sunday AMERICAN.

James Lane Allen Tells Us Why We and Our Parks Don't Mix

Distinguished Novelist Says We Haven't Acquired the Out-of-Door Habit and That Our Parks, While All Right to Drive Through, Don't Tempt Us to Stay and Spend the Day.

JAMES LANE ALLEN, the distinguished novelist, author of "A Kentucky Cardinal," "The Reign of Law" and other well known books, has been in Boston during the past six weeks, getting acquainted with the city and its environs, and working upon a new book.

Mr. Allen is a nature lover, and has spent much time in Boston parks and along the Boston boulevards. He has given the Boston AMERICAN an interview in which he tells his first Boston impressions and comments upon the lack of use of such wonderful parks as the Charles River Basin and Esplanade.

"The first impression Boston makes upon me as a bird lover and writer on nature is that it is the only American city that, as a whole, devotes itself to the protection of a bird and that bird is the pigeon.

"The stranger, if a traveler, thinks at once of the Plaza of St. Mark's in Venice, of the Gardens of the Tuileries in Paris, but all Venice and all Paris are not cities that care for the pigeon like all Boston. This sentiment about the common pigeon does not connect with some early legend which would make it a sacred bird, but rather with something of the modern spirit which now wishes to conserve all bird life.

"But of course you can't nourish pigeons without breeding places, roosting places and feeding places, and this brings us to the second impression, the verdure of Boston.

"The pigeons feed in the grass of the yards and squares and roost on the window ledges and under the eaves of the Boston houses. The verdure of Boston is remarkable. I do not know of any other American city that can even claim to be a worthy second. I feel it more sharply because I live in New York, which is verdureless except in a few spots.

"Looking at the vines on the houses and the trees around them, you begin to look at the houses, and get another impression, Boston architecture.

"Face to face with Boston architecture, my feeling is to call Boston the monochrome city. Boston is brick-colored. Red brick is a colonial tradition. It was the old colonial building material, brick and wood. It is strange that Boston, with the granite and marble wealth of New England to draw from, has clung to brick and wood for domestic buildings, when other cities have so pleasantly varied their building material.

"Richardson was the first Boston architect to get away from brick, and his brownstone buildings and their successors, of course, are to be found here. Try to imagine Beacon street with many of the finest blocks rebuilt with white marble, gray marble, green marble, from exquisite designs and all seen through the splendid old trees.

"On the other hand, the city of Washington is being made a poetic vision of beauty by its marble structures. Stand on the middle of Harvard Bridge and observe the city. You will then get my idea of the monochrome that is Boston."

"Are you familiar with the Boston parks?"

"Whenever I go to a city, the first thing I look for and try to reach are its parks, because they are my outdoor exercising and resting places. So I have come to know something of Boston parks. One feature of the park system which impressed me on coming back this Summer is the development of the Charles River Basin and the Esplanade. That is unique.

"You wonder what the effect would be upon this Boston Grand Canal of Venice if it were lined with white marble palaces instead of red brick houses.

"I was also impressed by the fact that so few people seemed to be using the wonderful esplanade or sailing about on boats on the lake. I said to myself: 'If this were in Europe it would be the playground of many thousands all the time.'

"However, it is neither the fault of the people nor the parks if in Boston and other American cities they are not more utilized. It is that the older Americans never had the outdoor habit, as it is enjoyed in Europe.

"Our aristocracy, for example, has never endeavored to make use of their parks as the aristocracy of London, Paris and Berlin do. The fact that these people are to be seen walking or driving or dining in the parks abroad makes them attractive to the common people. In the United States restaurants in the parks are almost unknown and one of the most delightful features of park life is lost.

"Here in Boston you have the ocean beaches. The public does not hesitate between the beach, where some approach to the European park life may be found, and the austere parks, which are nothing but landscape gardens with no features to make people wish to visit them besides the beauties of nature. At the beaches are restaurants, amusement devices and band concerts which they do not find in the parks. Your parks evidently cannot stand the competition with your beaches.

"The builders of American cities seldom thought of parks. They didn't have the open-air habit, and they built solidly. When they finally decided to build parks they had to seek the environs, and their only idea of using the parks was to walk, ride and drive through them. Spending whole days in the parks and lunching and dining al fresco never occurred to them.

"If today we find a movement toward the parks and open spaces, we owe it to our foreign population, which brought its ancestral and racial customs with it.

"And this movement now brings us to a crisis—the old warfare as to whether our parks shall be landscape gardens, idealizations of nature through which you may ride, drive or walk, or become playgrounds, picnic grounds and pleasure grounds, where the people shall lounge during their holidays, places for the unreserved usage of the whole body of the people. I cannot think of any better illustration than the different character of Boston Common and Boston Public Garden. If you throw open the garden to be used as a Common, in a year you won't have a garden. If you use the Common like the Public Garden, where do the people come in?

"I think that the public would be attracted to the Boston parks if they found there restaurants and music.

"Berlin is now the greatest open-air dining place in Europe. If the parks of Berlin were used only for driving or riding, they would be as comparatively empty as Boston parks.

"But the Boston parks are dinnerless deserts. Why should the holiday seekers go to such places.

"The continental Sunday will perhaps be the only way of bringing the Boston people and the Boston parks together and this also applies to most other American cities.

"It is still true that the Americans of the older stock remain undeveloped on the side of open-air tastes and pleasures, and so far as that picture of our civilization compares with Europe, it is due to the efforts of our foreign population."

THE NEW REMEDY

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

"Mayor Shanks for a year," so the news item said,
"By compound rheumatics was tied to his bed.
But he got himself stung by a squad of trained bees,
Which banished forever the hateful disease."

WHEN my aged Uncle Henry read this tense and terse dispatch,
The long-extinguished lamp of hope was lit beneath his thatch.
"If bees," said he, "cure rheumatiz, there can't be any doubt
That the stings of other critters will allay the pangs o' gout."
So Uncle spent an evening in a spotted adder's den
And never had a touch of gout—or anything—again.

The item, sent from shore to shore, ranged over alien strands
Until it reached a Zulu chief on Afric's burning sands.
"I'll try it for the mumps," said he, and down beside the Niger,
His face irradiating hope, he waked a sleeping tiger;
The tiger rose and bit him, and the noble Zulu chief
From the malady that vexed him, obtained permanent relief.

Abel Brown, the deep-sea sailor, found the brief dispatch one day
In a sailor's boarding parlor down at Magdalena Bay.
"I will cure my corns," he muttered; and that evening after dark
Abel Brown experimented with an ocean-going shark.
That the cure is quite effective seems to be extremely plain,
For since then our deep-sea hero hasn't had an ache or pain.
